REVIEW OF WERKSTATT B1 LOSUNGEN

- This was when everyone was thinking rationally. This was when I saw the beauty of the woman who would later become the Grandmother; set up on a blind date by her father with the mysterious Malcolm Foxworth her life is never the same again. Following a whirlwind romance, and wedding she's whisked away to Foxworth Hall, and all it's idosecrencies. She finds herself unloved, and only to breed a certain breed of children, and talk of Malcolm's mother is strictly forbidden. Well Malcolm shows what, and how he wants things in the Foxworth Hall...his way, and when his father shows up with his young new bride Alicia, and bad blood starts between Father and Son to where the mysterious death of Malcolm's father is never to be discussed. The secret is covered up, and everyone thinks that it's gone, but it's not. In fact this is where the lifelong cover up occurs. It's quoted in the Bible where God's wrath is shown on a person's family leading out to the 4th and 5th generations. This doesn't necessarily mean that if one generation messes up, but the other wants to get right with God that it's too late that God's wrath takes it's course, and nothing can stop it until after the 5th generation. If a family wants to turn, and break the chain, or any particular family member wants to go against the stream of what his family's doing then God will look upon them with favor. Salvation is for the individual, and not the family. A person can be saved, but he/she can't save thier family. Unfortunately, with the Foxworths it's where they walked around in darkness from one generation to the next starting here, and Malcolm's family fell apart where his sons respected him out of fear, and his wife just doted on her sons. Then with Malcolm's father's death came Alicia pregnant with Malcolm's baby which was a girl. Malcolm would name her Corrine after his mother who abandoned him when he was 5. Unfortunately, Malcolm couldn't let go of this, and after his sons died, and Corrine became a teenager she would be ready to go to the best college for women until she was discovered in bed with a young man who she only thought of as a first cousin, but in reality was her brother. This was the downfall of Foxworth Hall as Malcolm would throw the both of them out, and succumbed to a heart attack that would leave the Grandmother in charge. The ending of this book would be the foundation of the story that started it all "Flowers In The Attic". It was a book that made me begin to think of the grandmother in a different light. She seems to be a very loving woman who didn't have the peace of God within her spirit to weather this storm as she lost her beauty, and it was turned to ice. She would put off the air of grace, and seems to display it through allowing Corrine to move back to Foxworth Hall after losing her brother/husband to death. However, there was a lot of repressed anger seething under her that would make the following generations just as doomed.

- Having only recently been given this book it brought back to me those few days I spent in a remote but truly wonderful town. I was on American Airlines flight 101 from Heathrow to JFK and was diverted to Gander that morning. To say I met some of the most amazing people ever would be an understatement. My friend and I were looked after so well. A woman took us to her home so I could call my parents, another took us to her home to shower. Those I remember most fondly are Doug Brittain & his wife who took us into their home to sleep. Amazing people.
