REVIEW OF CLANBOOK BRUJAH VAMPIRE THE MASQUERADE PDF BOOK LIBRARY

- I liked the book, and came away with a top 15 for it. It was helpful.
- This is not a book that details planning, strategy or tactics. Instead, this is a series of interviews collected in connection with a decade-long project by personnel of the Eisenhower Center of the University of New Orleans. In addition to selecting and editing, Ronald Drez actually collected many of these interviews himself. The result is a skillfully pieced together vision of D-Day utilizing the authentic voices of the men who were there, who witnessed first hand the carnage and success of the largest amphibious invasion in history. These are the words of men who lived through the night jumps, the hellish push from the sea to the coast, the inch-by-inch clawing up the sand flats and cliffs of the Overlord beaches to hookup with the airborne troops already inland. The voices are French, German, British, Canadian and American. From 1st Sergeant Len Lomell on Pointe du Hoc with the 2nd Rangers, to Frank Simeone of C co. of the 116th on Omaha making his way up the Vierville draw, to my friend and neighbor, Ken Russell, of the 82nd Airborne hanging from his chute on the church at Ste. Mere Eglise before taking out a German AA truck, these are words chosen by the fighting men themselves. Contained in their words are the voices of the dead, voices felt and heard only with the heart and who perhaps speak loudest of all. And they speak to us of the price of freedom they and their comrades were willing to pay for us. Published on the fifty-year anniversary of D-Day it is a fitting tribute to the gallant men of that generation who lived and died that day and is a fine companion piece for Ambrose's excellent "D-Day".
