REVIEW OF DK EYEWITNESS TRAVEL

THAILAND EYEWITNESS TRAVEL S

• I do indeed believe that it may be impossible for G.K. Chesterton to disappoint his readers. In his clear, quick-witted brilliance, Chesterton reflects in this text on the utter brilliance of humanity and the Church with respect to the rest of the world. The text, while marked by the major philosophical conversations of the time, remains highly applicable to the world today. His anthropological vision is centered on a polemic against (and dialogue with) biological / cultural evolutionism. While not refuting these claims, he does temper their arguments to a degree. With respect to biological evolution, he posits the fact that man stands starkly out against the background of every other creature. He does not refute the fact that an evolution of growing complexity has occurred the entire way to and including humanity. What he refutes is the notion that humanity is just an "ape." Indeed, he is profoundly with Teilhard de Chardin's conviction that the crossing of the threshold of reflection gives the world its soul, for humanity is able to reflect upon perceptions and the self and thus love and sub-create. Culturally, he reflects on the evolutionary understanding of despotism and democracy as well as nomadism and settled life and their interrelationships and development (/non-development). His historic view is one which is wholly Christocentric, seeing the strivings of man in light of Christ. In many ways, Chesterton's reflections are oracular, for he sees the current trembling of Western Civilization far before the present day. Through the light of past mythological and philosophical musings of humanity, he outlines the foibles and follies which were ultimately answered in Christ. By means of this, he fulfills his desire to proclaim how Christianity is truly sane when viewed objectively (not with a hateful bias) from the outside as well as the inside. Additionally, he rails against those who would place Christ and the Church in the same categories as other religious/philosophical founders and their institutions. Ultimately, Chesterton's fantastic text is a standing testimony to the brilliance of humanity, Christ, and the Church in light of the larger picture of the rest of history and the world. The text is astute and witty, receiving my highest lauds and recommendations!

• I highly recommend this CD. Zig is at the top opening your eyes to a new way of seeing things. "Change the input, and you can change the output" is a classic statement, which we all should know but don't realize it so easy. This CD will motivate you to change your life and think it in a different way.
