From combatting "fake news" with fact checking in Silicon Valley, to reviving elementary school social studies in Nashville, to learning civic activism in Oklahoma City, journalist Holly Korbey documents the grassroots revival happening across the country. Along the way, she provides an essential guidebook for educators, school leaders and caregivers of all types who want to educate a new generation of engaged citizens at a critical time in American democracy.

REVIEW OF CIVICS TODAY TEXTBOOK

- Diamond, through exploring both modern and past societies, is able to provide a great account of the current state of global affairs and what we can do about them. He is able to tackle many problems of environmental destruction and arguments saying we should not worry about the way things are going. His accounts of modern and past societies focus on what went wrong and why such as the collapse of past societies such as the Easter Islands and the Anasazi and modern problems such as genocide in Rwanda and Burundi. His work provides accounts of the problems we face now and how we can change them.

- The first 450 pages of this book are interesting (albeit repetitive), but after talking about all of the problems caused by overpopulation (especially by First World citizens) the author reveals that at age 50 (FIFTY!) he and his wife decided to start having children; wasteful, First World, resource-depleting children. What an ass.
