REVIEW OF 13TH EUROPEAN DOCTORAL CONFERENCE IN NURSING SCIENCE EDCNS

- I read this one after listening to the audio of the author's other bicycling adventure through Greece. Sorry there aren't more! Set this one aside for a half-day plane/train trip.
- About a quarter of the way through the book, I started mentally ticking whenever a character would "burst into tears" or start "weeping" at someone's unnecessary emotional badgering or their sudden epiphany about the pointlessness of it all, and it became an almost unreadable soggy mess, sappier than tumblr at its worse. This wouldn't warrant such a horrible rating if it were just for that fact. But really that outlines the bigger problem, that too many times the emotional reaction from the characters was forced on us in inner tirades and monologues that SATURATE this novel, not tastefully pepper as in the previous installments. The best books evoke from the reader that "Oh..." moment, or a gasp, without characters musing ad nauseum about the meaning of it all. As if in Inception, they "went deeper" about 5 times more, Card introduces too many shallow, fake characters not even to fill a plot hole; they themselves dig the plot holes and then half-heartedly fill them all by themselves (the business family, the military officials? pointless). Every female character in this book is a bitch. No tension or suspense. Everything happens perfectly, there wasn't a single disappointment for any of the characters of the book, imagining these wildly implausible deus ex machina solutions, which all perfectly work. Nothing really happens plot-wise in this book. I read it dutifully having finished the first three in the series, expecting an incredible finale, but it really was a disappointment. Read Xenocide and stop while you're ahead.
