REVIEW OF INTERNATIONAL MANAGEMENT DERESKY 7TH EDITION DOWNLOAD

- This is a great book for those who want to open their homes and share tea time with friends. Marilyn and her husband write from what they know and do. Having tea with them is a wonderful experience, and this book shares their ideas, stories and some great recipes for serving tea for 2 or 200. A great resource for women's ministry leaders or home use.

- While I could definitely feel sadness for the husband and children of this woman who suffered so severely from bi-polar disorder/manic depression, there was a part of this book that made me laugh hysterically. Naturally, a child of an ill mother (whether mental or physical) is a topic which will generate sympathetic conversation. The subsequent loneliness and abandonment leaves a hole in children. At the same time, Kaye Gibbons portrayal of this woman made me laugh out loud. From her justifying hitting a woman with her car because she dared to wear a certain outfit, to her tirade over hearing the spoons click in the bowl, I began to wonder if I weren't a little imbalanced for finding it funny instead of sick. The reactions didn't seem so far fetched to me. That or perhaps I know a whole lot of undiagnosed folks out there who I thought were 'normal'.
