REVIEW OF HEDGE FUNDS FOR DUMMIES

- This story talks about Migrant Workers. It is set in the Great Depression, Lennie and George are best friends. They always travel around together looking for a job. Lennie is a huge man, but he has his mind like a little child. George is small. He is the one that puts things in order and makes decisions. They are together because they don't want to feel lonely and they wish to have their own house. In this story the characters have funny names about their appearances. For example: Lennie Small is ironic because he is a huge man (big) and strong, and symbolic because his mind is like a kid (small). When Lennie and George are in Weed, Lennie has some problems so they run from Weed and go to another job. In their new job they live in a bunkhouse. Everybody was looking at their relationship. In the new job they meet a lot of people. That is when the struggle begins. George prevents Lennie from having a conflict with some workers. But in some moments Lennie doesn't have George and he cannot guard Lennie from the provocations of a flirtatious woman. The woman doesn't have a name in the story. Probably you can find out why she doesn't have a name? This is good story. The most important knowledge that you learn from this story is the differences between loneliness and friendship. I thought that at the end something would happen, but I was surprised because other things happened. Of Mice and Men by John Steinbeck is a true story about how people lived in the 1929 - 1930's. I give 5 stars to this book.

- Of Mice and Men was a wonderful book that went to the heart of the readers. Steinbeck did a great job of making the reader feel the pain of the tragedy that never should have happened. I give this book a 10 because it was heart warming but sad and it also gave you a good insight on how each character reacted and what they were like.
