"The streets run red with blood when war breaks out between Blacks and Chicanos."--Cover.

Dopefiend Kensington Books

The author that brought black literature to the streets is back. Weaving stories of deceit, sex, humor and race Iceberg Slim, best-selling author of Pimp, brings us the story of a hustler who doesn't just play the con game, he transforms it. This is the gritty truth, the life of a hustler in south side Chicago where the only characters are those who con and those who get conned. Trick Baby tells the story of "White Folks," a blue-eyed, light-haired, con-artist whose pale skin allows him to pass in the streets as a white man. Folks is tormented early in life, rejected by other children and branded a "Trick Baby," the child conceived between a hooker and her trick. Refusing to abandon his life in the ghetto and a chance at revenge, Folks is taken under the wing of an older mentor, Blue. What happens next is not to be believed. Only Slim could bring us the story of a hustler, forced to learn the game and rise to the top. It's Slim's story and he tells it in the only way he knows how, in the language of the streets.

REVIEW OF DOPEFIEND DONALD GOINES

• The Giver by Lois Lowry The Giver shows us that memories are important to all individuals and societies. In the book the community that Jonas live in is strictly controlled by a group of elders. The citizens have very little decision making to do, all aspects of everyday life is controlled for them, in the book it was called "Sameness". Everything was the same because the citizens had no memories of what life was like before they converted their life to "Sameness". These memories help people perceive the world and without them they are not really experiencing a fulfilling life. Jonas found this out after he had been passed on memories by the Giver, he realized that his life had not been whole and fulfilling without "first generation memories". Memories play an important part in a culture because they make each culture distinct. In the book the culture that Jonas lived in did not differ very much from the other communities in the surrounding area. Part of a culture is its folklore and stories of that kind and these stories are passed on from one generation after another, there is no such passing on of information to the next generation in the book and this creates somewhat of a separation of each generation, even though the citizens do not realize this. Folklore give a culture color and wholeness and since part of folklore is memory the society in the book did not have the color and wholeness since there was no memories that were not "first generation", there was no color and wholeness in the community.

• ... The giver, a very mysterious and new kind of book, did not sound interesting because of its simple title. Instead of boring, I found it to be very interesting. I did like it more than the books I have read in school like A Separate Peace or Great Expectation. This book was different from the others; it was a mysterious and fantasized book. I love books that are out of the ordinary. For instance, the part where they said that people were being released. I did not know where they were going. That made me want to read it and find out. Another part was when the 12th years got their job assigned to them. It was intense because Jonas number was skipped. The other part that got me going was what was the name of the girl before Jonas that was Receiver. All this and more in this exciting novel. I do not want to give away the ending, but anyone who picks up this book cannot stop reading it. I give this book a 4 because it is the best of the books I have read for an English class.
