REVIEW OF IPC AND ANSWERS J STD 001

- Despite being out of print, this remains one of the best photo books I own. The images are compelling and takes you on a tour of the second half of the last century in photography. From Robert Capa to Ansel Adams, this is bound to inspire you. Let it be printed again !

- I discovered this writer recently. Nathan Leslie is, in my view, currently one of the prolific and insightful short story writers. His A Cold Glass of Milk was a well constructed sampling of first person voice--this is his specialty. In Drivers the author has allowed the reader a glimpse into the world we all know--the world of commuters and road rage. This makes the collection important, I think. Leslie's stories are fascinating in that they don't pull punches. My favorite stories in the collection are "Flyboys Down the Big End" (about race car drivers in the 50's and 60's), "Cog" (about a car mechanic), "Shape" (about a car salesman--intricate portrayal), and "Oh, Duesenberg" (about a love for cars that goes beyond the boundaries of normal). He is a master of characterization--all the characters in the collection really come to life. But all of the stories in the collection are interesting in their own way really. Leslie sandwiches very short stories between his longer stories. He is an author who hasn't yet received his due. In my humble opinion, it is only a matter of time.
