REVIEW OF COMPANY ACCOUNTING 9TH EDITION LEO HOGGETT

- I really liked the book I Was a Teenage fairy because it really relates to the things that actually happen in high school to a lot of teenagers. In this book there was a girl named Barbie and she had a fairy the size of her pinky named mab. Mab helped Barbie out on a lot of problems that she has in the future
- I picked up this book expecting to gain additional insight on Viet Nam, and specifically the areas of Chu Lai, Antenna Valley, and Phu Loc that I saw from the mountains and ridgelines while serving with 1st Force Recon. I was so disappointed that I am writing my first review after reading more than 200 novels and histories of the Viet Nam war. My first concern involves the repetitious personal opinion, misinformation on both current politics and pre-1966 VN history, and the unnecessary duplication of individuals, actions and editorilizing repeated in every chapter. As a previous reviewer noted, this appears to be a series of independently written articles that were combined without critical review or even minimal editing. Were Mr. Culbertson's three volumes to be professionally edited, they would easily fit in one volume and the important things he has to impart would not be lost in the high grass of bombastic rhetoric. My second problem is with the inferences concerning then President Johnson's only concern being selling helicopters. The truth was that the Marine Corps preoccupation with 1940's tactics, and our forced dependence on 1950's equipment, frequently contributed to the unnecessary death and disability of literally hundreds of Marines. Only the excellent courage, toughness, and loyalty of individual grunts allowed the resulting high kill ratios, and frequently the bare survival of the units involved. Had the Marine Corps had even a fraction of the air mobile assets of the Army (and the updated tactics), a lot more kids would have made it home while doubling the damage against the enemy. I was saddened that the poorly planned and implemented Operation Tuscaloosa was glorified without being critically evaluated. Yes, those kids stood up and charged directly into a well planned and executed ambush. What was never questioned was why Marine blood was so generously shed to save a situation that they should never had been blindly and overconfidently led into. My final point is that Mr. Culbertson needs to forgive Gunny Hathcock, and others, who did their jobs utilizing different tactics appropriate to and highly effective in different tactical environments. I do not understand his bitterness, but it discredits his own admirable achievements and again detracts from the experiences that he has to relate. Brother, I also am unforgiving of LBJ, traitor Fonda, Strange MacNamera, and all those others who abandoned and betrayed us. Move on. Become as professional a writer as you were a Marine and a sniper. Do not let the lessons you can teach be obscured or discredited by your pain. Semper fi!
