An extension of an earlier longitudinal study of thriving, average, or non-thriving kindergarten children, this study examined the intellectual, academic, social, self-directive, and temperamental characteristics of children from kindergarten to grade four. Fifty-four of the children were perceived by their junior or senior kindergarten teachers as "thriving in terms of your goals"; 64 were perceived as "making average progress"; and 50 as "not as yet thriving" in kindergarten. Forty-six children were in a junior kindergarten-grade 1-grade 3 cohort, while the remaining 112 children were in a senior kindergarten-grade 2-grade 4 cohort. Data obtained included test data on language, memory, and academic achievement; and teacher-rated data on self-direction, resistance to distraction, social abilities, resistance to frustration, and risk-taking. Results indicated that differences between children perceived in kindergarten as thriving, average, or not thriving persisted through grade four for language, academic achievement, and teacher ratings of self-direction, resistance to distraction, and risk-taking. Achievement differences were greater for the senior-kindergarten-grade 4 cohort, but still significant for the junior-kindergarten-grade 3 cohort. Rating differences were of the same magnitude for both cohorts. Results of data analysis also concerned children who were perceived by grade three and four teachers to have changed in thrive status versus those who had not. Children "shifting" between average and thriving status or vice versa had corresponding changes in achievement tests and teacher ratings. (Author/HOD)

REVIEW OF ANSWERS TO GUIDED ACTIVITY 9 3

- The first story is "Moontide". Moira is the daughter of the lord of a sea keep who sent her to the Countess for fostering. The Countess has a reputation for turning out socially expert marriage bait. But she also turns out Gray Ladies who are spies and assassins. Moira is one. Overall the story is well written with a decent plot and it shows a side of the 500 kingdoms where the folks are not involved in the inner workings of The Tradition (a force that makes things come out the way it thinks they should). Her father calls Moria home with an obvious intent of marrying her off To cement an alliance and gets more than he bargained for.I had trouble swallowing a boat house that would withstand a 30'+ storm surge but hey this is a fantasy so a gimme. The plot is a little linear and predictable if sometimes funny. The principal characters are well drawn although Moira's father and his motives are never fleshed out. Unfortunately; there are a number of annoying editorial errors and I have the impression that review of this story was rather cursory. e.g. "the sigh of the phoenix embroidered..." (thats got to be some realistic embroidery) and then in one case the beacons are fulfilled with fish oil and then by magically treated sea coal.3 1/2 stars, much better than average.The next story "The Heart of the Moon" Cliando is sent on a quest to a mysterious island by a priestess after being betrayed by friends. There she meets Zemetrioss who has similar issues. The symbolism is well done like something fromThe Golden Bough: A Study in Magic and Religion: A New Abridgement from the Second and Third Editions (Oxford World's Classics)orThe Hero with a Thousand Faces (Mythos Books).4 1/2 just misses a 5 star rating as the plot is a little predictable (at least if you are familiar with either or the above books).With "Banshee Cries" Walker combats a supernatural serial killer. The story falls betweenUrban Shaman (The Walker Papers, Book 1)andThunderbird Falls (The Walker Papers, Book 2). Walker is still trying to come to grips with her powers and is uneasy with them. The characters are well drawn with some good humor as well. The plot is good but no big surprises.Overall 4 stars.As a book I would rate this anthology at 4 stars.

- John Grisham continues to expand his writing, from courts and trials and litigation, to a home in the Delta and the family who lives there and whose survival depends on the crops and the workers they can hire to bring them in. Then he writes of sports and a team and what it is like to be a kid playing what is supposed to be a game: a game that becomes the game of life. Now, Grisham ventures into an arena that encompasses his love of the law and his comprehension of real life. As I read The Last Juror, I saw how brilliantly the author wove a tapestry of life in the South, using the thread of the trial to hold the fabric together. I found it beautiful and I hope everyone who reads it appreciates the story within the story and can understand life in the South, even as it exists today.
