REVIEW OF AA MEETING SLIP PDF

- All things considered, this is an excellent book covering some of worst naval disasters to befall the US Navy during the 20th Century. Embarrassments such as the Squadron of seven destroyers which followed their leader onto the jagged rocks of the Californian coast in September 1923 and the comedy of errors which surrounded the loss of the USS Milwaukee in January 1917 are covered in sufficient detail to give the reader a full appreciation of events. Of course, the business of a warship is war and, whether or not engaged in that particular task on the front line or training for that role in times of peace, all warships are dangerous places in which to live and work. The explosion in No 2 Turret of the USS Iowa on 19 April 1989 is fully recounted in a factual manner. Preceded by the history of this class of battleship and the worldwide political situation which led to the necessity of her design and implementation, we are treated to a complete appraisal of this accident and its tragic consequences. The cutaway sectional diagram of a typical, 5 storey!, 16 inch gun mounting does much to explain those consequences as clearly as possible. Well supported with plenty of black and white images throughout, the content is divided into Chapters on; Collision and Grounding (six ships plus that Destroyer Squadron), Explosion (three ships), Fire (four ships) and finally Mysterious and Curious (six ships), this is a fairly comprehensive coverage of the subject and one which I thoroughly enjoyed reading. - I think that Minfong really processes a good knowledge of vocabulary and the knowledge of knowing how to express them. Dawan is a girl which I thought would give up on the thought of having a scholarship in a city initially. I never knew that she is so determined that she can actually moved her father to the positive way of looking that girls need to study further also. This a fine, good example that happens in our world every time especially in a country where women are not think important.
