REVIEW OF ML AGGARWAL CLASS 12TH DIFFERENTIATION SOLUTION IN

- I have read extensively about the Westward movement and the settling of the West. I found this book offered a different perspective than most. It concentrated on one ethnic group (the Norwegians) and one settlement in the Dakota territory. It provided an intimate picture of family life and social interactions in this settlement. It was realistic and alluded to having a drop now and again and other behavior not usually mentioned in writings about this era. Written from a male point of view it was interesting to see the male character's interpretation of the woman's thoughts and feelings. It would be an excellent read for people who are caught up in the greed and materialism of today's society. I take issue with the respondent who gave this book one star and revealed the ending in a callous manner. Perhaps when this individual is older and has experienced personal losses he/she will have more compassion.

- Historical mystery stories are popular and increasingly common. The countries and eras include ancient China, Japan, England, the U.S. and many other locales. There are several good authors that specialize in Japanese historical mysteries. Dale Furutani is a capable member of this group. The story has a sympathetic protagonist in a samurai who is willing to take some personal risks to save a commoner from an unjust sentence. This is not a chambara mystery with a lot of sword fighting, but rather an intellectual mystery that shows the samurai using his insights and observational powers to unravel a complicated plot. Overall I enjoyed the book and will read more by the author. The version I read was on one of my several Amazon Kindles. The formatting and ease of use were both fine.
