REVIEW OF PAST EXAM PAPERS GRADE 11 HISTORY

- ...If not pick up a real philosophy book. This is fluff my roommate picked up because he thought the Matrix was 'deep'. I love the movies but this is pathetic. These concepts are too important to be treated so shallowly. This is a primer for one who has no genuine interest in philosophy.

- While there were some rants that I didn't agree with, for the most part, I found myself agreeing to a lot of what Maher had to say here. Written not long after 9/11 he has some great points about terrorism, national security and the way forward which, sadly, still ring true today (we've made a stunning lack of progress). It made me realize just how far we have to go. I recently read and reviewed America Alone (another book I really enjoyed, by conservative author Mark Steyn), which makes some of the same points that Maher, a liberal writer and pundit, makes in this book (which is to say the over-arching theme that too many Americans claim not to "do politics"). But both authors argue it's not (solely) about politics. It's about waking up, not believing everything you're sold in the media, doing your own fact-checking and becoming an educated citizen of the world. It's an obligation, not a demand on your free-time. Some crass remarks and language, but otherwise recommended.
