REVIEW OF LUIGIS LANGUAGE OF NAPKIN FOLDING BY LUIGI SPOTORNO

- I first read Scary Stories To Tell In The Dark at age 7, (I'm 17 now) after stumbling upon it in my cousin's closet. I couldn't sleep after reading it, (complements of Stephen Gammell's illustrations) and immediatly bought the whole series. My favorite story out of the whole series is "Harold" in Scary Stories 3; I won't ruin the story for you, lets just say you'll never look at a scarecrow the same way again. Also, the notes in the back of the books on the origin of the stories is often as interesting as the stories themselves, as you often get some slight variations. My advice to any horror fan would be to buy this series, no matter your age, I think you'll enjoy them.

- "There are lies, there are dam*ed lies, and then there are statistics". Or should I say, badly skewed and extremely bad assumptions made not on statistical analysis but emotional agendas. Perhaps the Swedish commenter above was but one of the "so called researchers" that was proven hysterical in this often hilariously revealing book. The greenhousers, the cancer commentators, and the news media that jumps on any outlandish story to fill in for a slow news day will HATE this book. For the rest of us Joe-Schmoe-Give-It-To-Me-Straight-Folks, we'll LOVE it!! I'm sure we've all learned through the media that EVERYTHING causes cancer, and we're all a bunch of selfish people who's own flatulence causes the earth to grow warmer and our earth to perish, and none of us on this planet seem to appreciate the fact that no one can think for themselves - that is - not without the media spoon feeding us junk science. It's a shame there aren't more people as skeptical and practical as this guy. More starving nations would be fed. More sick people cured instead of being injured by bad science or worse...lies. More hysteria avoided. Wow, wouldn't the family get together be alot better when everyone finally figures out that cholesterol actually is responsible for the building blocks of your brain instead of ...drum roll please... HEART DISEASE!Go you Junk Science Debunker!
