REVIEW OF BECAUSE MY FATHER ALWAYS SAID HE WAS THE ONLY INDIAN WHO

• I have been an avid superhero fan since a child. I have read many comics, both good and bad. This collection of DC stories is by far the most visually appealing. Not only is the art work of Alex Ross incredible, but the story telling is phenomenal as well. In this book Superman tries to cure hunger, Batman endeavors to completely cease criminal activity, and Wonder Woman aims to free oppressed women. Each character runs into the same problem. They are only one person. Despite all their super-abilities they are unable to eradicate the crime, starvation, oppression, etc. The realization the characters come to is devastating but well portrayed. They are timeless stories about ageless heroes. The second section of the book deals with the JLA. My favorite section is the "Secret Origins" part where each main character of the JLA gets a two page origin spread! All in all the book is worth the money. It is a treasure to read over and over again. Share it with friends and family. A must have!

- Robert Louis Stevenson's Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde was a disappointing, unstimulating, and over-graphic story. At times it was too pictorial and at others they will change things up and no one will say or revealed a thing to save some rich man's secret background from coming to the light. The entire plot of the book is revealed in the first twenty pages. Everyone has heard parts of the book. People know Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde are the same man. They know he drinks a potion and changes. They know one is good and the other is evil. Everything is known before you even read the book. I half way expected Hyde to be huge and beast-like similarly to the way he is seen in comic books and even movies. That part was disappointing. The fact that the book jumps from one perspective to the next and the story is simply retold from another point of view. It is simply not a good book. There is a lesson in this. If your wife tells you a book is bad and you burn the original chances are the second is going to stink just as bad.
