REVIEW OF 8842544108 IT29

- I really enjoyed this play even though it was a class assignment. It gives you a feel of this huge chunk of our worlds history that no one can fully understand. I wasn't really into ready anything of this sort, but it was really cool. I liked it a lot :)
- I liked how The Crucible focused on the Salem Witch trials, because the Salem Witch trials fascinate me. I liked how Arthur Miller focused on the young girls playing in the woods trying to conjure spirits from the dead. I found it funny when the girls blamed others for practicing witchcraft. If I would have got in the same situation, I think I would have blamed someone else to. I liked how he let the audience feel like they were witnessing the trials. I didn't like how Abigail was having an affair with Proctor and tried accusing his wife of witchcraft. It was stupid to do that because, it wasn't Proctor's fault. I didn't like the character Putnam, because he murdered his neighbors and accused them of witchcraft. Just so that he could get their land. My favorite characters were Proctor, because he was put through a lot. He resembled me in a way, because when he would do something wrong, or something bad would happen, he would try working it out. I like Reverend Parris, because he didn't want to leave even though certain things were happening. I liked Elizabeth Proctor, because she was honest. I liked Deputy Governor Danforth the most, because he sentenced the people who refused to confess their crimes to death. The characters I didn't like were Betty Parris, because when her dad caught her in the woods dancing, she started accusing other people of witchcraft. I didn't like Abigail, because she had an affair with Proctor, and makes others say they see spirits too, and accused Proctor's wife of witchcraft. I didn't like Thomas Putnam, because he was accusing people of witchcraft so he could have their land. The development of the play was well organized. Arthur Miller introduces the four most important themes, which are deception, possession, greed, and the quest for power in the first act. That way his audiences can become aware of what is important. The narrator provides the best background information. The explanatory passages allow the directors and actors to focus on the characters' motivation. That helps them have a better understanding of the characters and the historical period. The characters in the play are more engaging because they all have some type of tension between them.
