What is the relationship between common-sense, or 'folk', psychology and contemporary scientific psychology? Are they in conflict with one another? Or do they perform quite different, though perhaps complementary, roles? George Botterill and Peter Carruthers discuss these questions, defending a robust form of realism about the commitments of folk psychology and about the prospects for integrating those commitments into natural science. Their focus throughout the book is on the ways in which cognitive science presents a challenge to our common-sense self-image - arguing that our native conception of the mind will be enriched, but not overturned, by science. The Philosophy of Psychology is designed as a textbook for upper-level undergraduate and beginning graduate students in philosophy and cognitive science, but as a text that not only surveys but advances the debates on the topics discussed, it will also be of interest to researchers working in these areas.

"Fascinating . . . memorable . . . revealing . . . perhaps the best of Carl Sagan's books."—The Washington Post Book World (front page review) In Cosmos, the late astronomer Carl Sagan cast his gaze over the magnificent mystery of the Universe and made it accessible to millions of people around the world. Now in this stunning sequel, Carl Sagan completes his revolutionary journey through space and time. Future generations will look back on our epoch as the time when the human race finally broke into a radically new frontier—space. In Pale Blue Dot, Sagan traces the spellbinding history of our launch into the cosmos and assesses the future that looms before us as we move out into our own solar system and on to distant galaxies beyond. The exploration and eventual settlement of other worlds is neither a fantasy nor luxury, insists Sagan, but rather a necessary condition for the survival of the human race. "Takes readers far beyond Cosmos . . . Sagan sees humanity's future in the stars."—Chicago Tribune

A central current in the history of democratic politics is the tensions between the political culture of an informed citizenry and the potentially antidemocratic impulses of the larger mass of individuals who are only marginally involved in the political world. Given the public's low level of political interest and knowledge, it is paradoxical that the democratic system works at all. In The Paradox of Mass Politics W. Russell Neuman analyzes the major election surveys in the United States for the period 1948-1980 and develops for each a central index of political sophistication based on measures of political interest, knowledge, and style of political conceptualization. Taking a fresh look at the dramatic findings of public apathy and ignorance, he probes the process by which citizens acquire political knowledge and the impact of their knowledge on voting behavior. The book challenges the commonly held view that politically oriented college-educated individuals have a sophisticated grasp of the fundamental political issues of the day and do not rely heavily on vague political symbolism and party identification in their electoral calculus. In their expression of political opinions and in the stability and coherence of those opinions over time, the more knowledgeable half of the population, Neuman concludes, is almost indistinguishable from the other half. This is, in effect, a second paradox closely related to the first. In an attempt to resolve a major and persisting paradox of political theory, Neuman develops a model of three publics, which more accurately portrays the distribution of political knowledge and behavior in the mass population. He identifies a stratum of apoliticals, a large middle mass, and a politically sophisticated elite. The elite is so small (less than 5 percent) that the beliefs and behavior of its member are lost in the large random samples of national election surveys, but so active and articulate that its views are often equated with public opinion at large by the powers in Washington. The key to the paradox of mass politics is the activity of this tiny stratum of persons who follow political issues with care and expertise. This book is essential reading for concerned students of American politics, sociology, public opinion, and mass communication.

REVIEW OF AP HUMAN GEOGRAPHY TEST BANK

• Fifty years ago Leonard Ravenhill wrote Why Revival Tarries. It is now a modern classic. It has sold over half a million copies, and is translated into numerous languages. It is still widely available today. This book is a devotional classic because its author is one who was more concerned about the verdict of the Almighty than his own reputation; more interested in holiness than happiness; and more interested in the glory and honour of God than the praise and applause of men. It is actually composed of various articles he had written earlier, but because it flows from a heart on fire for God, and a life dedicated to holiness and sanctification, the words contain fire and power. No one who is sick of the ordinary and is desirous only of God and his best will be untouched by this powerful book. How can one adequately review a book such as this? Every page has memorable ideas and burning words. Perhaps the best way to present this book to others is simply to feature many of its valuable quotes. Ravenhill argues that we do not have revival for the simple reason that we really don't want revival. We are simply too contented, too smug, too self-satisfied, and too carnal. Our hearts are not broken and we do not earnestly long for a powerful move of God. "Revival comes as a result of a cleansed section of the Church, bent and bowed in supplication and intercession," says Ravenhill. "The price of revival," he says, "is travail." But where is the prayer, the brokenness, the seeking after God? As he says elsewhere, "The only reason we don't have revival is because we are willing to live without it!" That is our problem. We have become too comfortable, too lazy, too apathetic and too indifferent. In other words, we are neither hot nor cold, but, like the Laodicean church, are simply lukewarm, and we deserve to be spewed out of the Lord's mouth. Prayer is the key to revival, and Ravenhill speaks as much to our prayerlessness as anything else. Unless we get serious about prayer, and forget our trivial pursuits and worldly amusements, we simply will not see revival break forth. Prayer is the key says Ravenhill: "No man is greater than his prayer life." Our greatness for the Kingdom will be directly proportional to our greatness in prayer. "To be much for God, we must be much with God." The praying man is unstoppable: "He who fears God fears no man. He who kneels before God will stand in any situation." Ravenhill reminds us that "As the Church goes, so goes the world." The world is in a mess because the church is in a mess. And the church is in a mess because so many of its leaders and preachers are in a mess: "The tragedy of this late hour is that we have too many dead men in the pulpits giving out too many dead sermons to too many dead people." If our churches are not full of dead men and women, they certainly seem to be full of sleeping men and women. "In the church pillars have given place to pillows." How can God move in such a situation? How can God work when the material in his hands is hard, unwieldy and crumbling? Until we start to see our spiritual need, and start to cry out to God, revival will elude us. "If the Church today had as many agonizers as she has advisors, we would have a revival in a year." Where are the men and women of God who travail and agonize over the woeful situation we find ourselves in? Until we are broken and repentant, we will see no fresh move of God's Spirit. "The church must first repent; then the world will break! The church must first weep; then our altars will be filled with weeping penitents." Ravenhill goes so far as to suggest, "This generation of preachers is responsible for this generation of sinners." Strong words, but true. Our problem is ourselves and our spiritual leaders. We need to break up the fallow ground and seek for the new rains. We simply cannot keep blaming the world for all our troubles. In many ways we have only ourselves to blame: "I do not marvel so much at the patience of the Lord with the stonyhearted sinners of the day. After all, would we not be patient with a man both blind and deaf? And such are the sinners. But I do marvel at the Lord's patience with the sleepy, sluggish, selfish Church! A prodigal Church in a prodigal world, is God's real problem." He reminds us of 1 Peter 4:17: "Judgement must first begin in the house of God." This is where we must begin. It is long overdue. If we do not act, and act soon, then the chances of revival - at least in the West - look very slim indeed. This book is spiritual dynamite. Those who already have it should pull it off the shelves and reread it. Those who do not yet have it need to go out and get it. The revival we all so desperately need basically carries because of us - because of our coldness and hardness. This book will go a long way in helping to melt the ice and soften our hardened hearts.

- I was really disappointed with this one-her first book is so much better. I found it really boring and just not that much useful info. Save your money and check it out at the library first if you think you may want it. Wish I had. But, Miserly Moms is definitely worth the money, I use it all the time.
