REVIEW OF INTERNATIONAL ECONOMICS

PUGEL 15TH EDITION

- As a Deist myself, I would recommend this book to anyone who is interested in Deism. Paine uses this book to point out the problems with not only the Christian religion, but also Judaism and Islam. He uses simply reason, which he calls, "The most formidable weapon against errors of every kind," to point out problems and direct contradictions within these religions. This book is clear and concise. It is one of the most eye-opening books I have ever read.
- Unlike so many books pointing out some of the absurdities of fundamentalism, this volume is neither shrill nor dry. Paine wrote one of the funniest, liveliest, wittiest volumes on religion there ever was. With a gifted eye for nonsense and logical inconsistency (allow Paine to walk you through the Bible and it will never seem the same to you again. He is able to point out so much that others have missed), Paine uses the scriptures as a basis for what amounts to being one of the funniest monologues ever written. He hammers home his arguments with a razor sharp intellect and a gift for the concise, epigrammatic, hilarious statement. It is too bad that Paine was better at working for others (the early colonies of the USA) than for himself. He died quite poor, almost completely forgotten and neglected, usually drunk, and often in the company of women who were beneath him. His fiery temperament was more suited to conflict and great causes than to retirement. Without a cause, he easily fell into dissolution. As so many other great men discover in their later years, the stimulation of the carnal appetites serve as a poor substitute for the excitements of their younger, more productive days. If it were not for the gift of a farm, he would have starved. The US owes him a great debt as his other writings galvanized the colonies and are pretty much the reason why we are no longer a part of Great Britain. I, for one, tip my hat to him.
