REVIEW OF EXPLORING CORPORATE STRATEGY 2006 GERRY JOHNSON KEVAN

- Oh my! What an unforgettable book... It is not only a love story, but a story of a governess. This story is told from the point of view of the nicest, cleverest, humblest, and sometimes funny main character Agnes (One of the best "ever after" main characters ever!), who becomes a governess to support her family. The first family she lives with is so weird! Read and see for yourself how mentally wrong that family is, which is sad for their children. Even though it is a hard job, she does not give up and tries to help the children. However, it does not go as she had hoped! Then, she goes to a second family, and falls in love! This is the section that I am so OMG because of the way she describes herself falling in love, and not being able to do anything because of her circumstances and his circumstances! Oh, please read this book if you totally LOVE Jane Austen's Persuasion!

• Set in North Africa on the Mediterranean in the 1940's, the town of Oran becomes infested with bubonic plague, at first the authorities pursue a path of denial, finally the town is put under total quarantine for months until the disease has run its course. People are dying by the hundreds each week, some trying to escape or smuggle, some engaged in the most heroic acts of their lives, no one can leave and no one can come into the town as though under a siege. Unfortunately, I found this to be the dullest thing I've read since Naipal's "A Bend in the River". In spite of the horrific events continually taking place in the book the story went on in the same monotone, passionless style from beginning to end. There is much philosophical insight in the behavior of humans in times of exile and stress from continual fear, but I think this author should have stayed away from fiction and stayed with philosophy or perhaps documentaries. This book was like reading an extremely well written composition but it never engaged my emotions.
