Lipids are responsible not just for constituting cellular membrane but also for storing energy, transducing signaling, and modifying proteins. Bioactive lipids, or lipid mediators, transduce signaling as intracellular messenger like phosphoinositides, and also regulate cell-cell communication through G protein-coupled receptors (GPCRs) that are potentially valuable drug targets in many diseases. Until now, about 40 GPCRs within ~300 rhodopsin-like (class A) GPCRs, are identified as lipid GPCRs. Advances of lipid research have enabled to develop novel small molecules targeting lipid GPCRs for several diseases. Most notably, fingolimod (FTY720), a sphingosine 1-phosphate (S1P) receptor modulator, became the first FDA-approved medicine as an orally bioavailable drug for treating relapsing forms of multiple sclerosis (MS). In addition to fingolimod, other drugs targeting lipid GPCRs had been developed such as latanoprost (prostaglandin F2a analogue, used for ocular hypertension and glaucoma), epoprostenol and treprostinil (prostaglandin I2 analogue, used for pulmonary arterial hypertension), montelukast and pranlukast (cysteinyl leukotriene receptor antagonist, used for asthma and allergies), etc. Novel drugs are also expected like lysophosphatidic acid (LPA) receptor antagonist for treatment of pulmonary fibrosis. Drug development targeting lipid signalling pathways are backdated to more than a century, when aspirin was synthesized and selling by Bayer, while the basic mechanism of aspirin's effects (block prostanoid synthesis by inhibiting cyclooxygenases) had not been discovered until 1970s. Nowadays, non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drugs (NSAIDs) like aspirin and ibuprofen are commonly used as antipyretic analgesics and available readily over-the-counter oral drugs. Both upstream and downstream enzymes, such as phospholipase A2s and prostaglandin E synthases, respectively, are also potential therapeutic targets for inflammatory diseases. Recent studies of lipid metabolism expand the lipid biology field from pro-inflammatory lipid mediators to anti-inflammatory epoxy fatty acids (epoxyeicosatrienoic acids), and also omega-3 fatty acid-derived pro-resolving lipid mediators (lipoxin, resolvin, and neuroprotectin). These bioactive lipids, their metabolic pathways and receptors are of great interest in developing next-generation anti-inflammatory and pro-resolving drugs for a wide variety of diseases including. This book summarizes not only historical overview of lipid signaling pathways but also provides summary of cutting-edge studies that may provide some hints of novel "druggable" lipid signaling targets.

Headdresses and coverings are among the most powerful vehicles of cultural identity, referring variously to nationality, gender, ethnicity, religion, profession and sub-culture. As part of a cultural identity, they can be used to distinguish or divide people, but may also serve as a constructive instrument that allows us to recognise mutual differences as a common value. Cultural identity is continuously evolving. Photos and texts provide a vehicle to question prevailing dynamics of identity and identification, visual stereotypes and cultural representation. Daniela Dossi's long-term residency at the open and collective studio Manoeuvre, a multidisciplinary artist-run space in Ghent's Rabot neighbourhood, resulted in an open design method, a textile research project based on a visual and textual archive of headdresses from around the world, and a preliminary collection of hybrid headdresses. The super-diversity of the studio provided the ideal context for this research. Together with Dossi, participants from diverse backgrounds and origins made 800 textile samples by hand using different techniques. Based on this open system, new hybrid headdresses and narratives can be designed by remixing images, texts and textiles: what might the headdress of the first Mexican, female President of the United States look like, for example? 'Hybrid Heads' is a project by Daniela Dossi and Manoeuvre. It is also an exhibition, an interactive installation, a web platform and a design-educational programme. Exhibition: Design Museum, Ghent, Belgium (04.04.-01.09.2019).

This book presents an overview of the most important current developments in the pre-analytical handling of tissue. It addresses in particular potential ways to improve the situation whereby methods employed in the pre-analytical phase – the period from surgical removal of tissue to the start of pathological processing – have remained essentially unchanged for decades with only modest standardization. It is examined how the pre-analytical period can be optimized, resulting not only in an increase in diagnostic quality but also in a reduction in processing time and costs. Among the key topics examined are the so-called cold ischemia time between tissue removal and fixation, the potential superiority of vacuum-based preservation over immediate formalin fixation, two-temperature fixation, molecular analysis methods, and the pre-analytics of specimens from particular tissues. Readers will find this book to be an important update that reveals the full importance of the pre-analytical phase for quality of pathological work-up.

Drawing together communiqués, covert interviews and underground histories of introvert struggles (Introfada), here for the first time is a detailed documentation of the political demands of shy people. Radicalized against the imperial domination of globalized PR projectionism, extrovert poise and loudness, the Shy Radicals are a vanguard movement intent on trans-rupting the extrovert-supremacist politics and assertiveness culture of the 21st-century. The movement aims to establish an independent homeland Aspergistan, a utopian state for introverted people, run according to Shyria Law and underpinned by Pan-Shyist ideology, protecting the rights of the oppressed quiet and shy people. This anti-systemic manifesto, a quiet and thoughtful polemic, is a satire that uses anti-colonial theory to build a critique of dominant culture and the rising tide of Islamophobia. Shy Radicals author Hamja Ahsan (b. 1981) is an artist, curator and activist based in London. He is the Free Talha Ahsan campaign organizer.

REVIEW OF ISBN 978 92 871 7703 2 EDQM

- I'd give this book three and a half if I could. It does still manage to hold my attention more than just about every other fantasy novel I've read. But it's not as good as the beginning. In the first two or three books, Nynaeva was a character to admire for her courage and complexity - her silent love affair with Lan and the way she dispensed justice to the Seanchan sul'dam made her my favorite character of the series. But now she has been reduced to a squabbling, annoying whiner. Of course arguing makes her more human, but over and over again? It just gets on my nerves. Give me back the pre-White Tower flight Nynaeva, please!

- Sandra Hirsh and Jane Kise have co-authored a book entitled "Soul Types - Matching Your Personality and Spiritual Path." Both of these ladies write extensively and have a vast array of books to their credit. Hirsh is an expert on the Myers-Briggs Type Indicator and Kise specializes in team building and strategic planning. Though this book has many good things to say, unless one has a thorough understanding of the Myers-Briggs Type concepts the book is too difficult to understand completely. There are a number of terms the authors either created just for the purpose of writing this book or redefined to suit their own purposes. This adds to the difficulty in understanding this book. The first key to understanding the book is to understand their definition of spirituality. "Here, spirituality refers to aligning our souls with heart, mind and body to fulfill one's purpose, believing that reality includes more than the tangible, and it refers to pursuing a relationship with One greater than ourselves" (pages 17-18). The second key to understanding the book is to learn their definition of a new word they created, soulwork. "Soulwork means the pursuits and practices that allow for meaning, purpose, and wholeness in life, reaching beyond direct experiences to the unseen around us" (page 18). The final key to understanding the book is to grasp their definition of religion. "Religion refers to a way of life pursuing soulwork by banding with others who espouse the same beliefs or creeds" (page 18). Once the reader comes to understand these three key terms, then the book itself can begin to be digested. As much as I disliked all their terms and definitions, the writers did bring some clarity to my mind about why some people find it more difficult to find spirituality in traditional Christian churches than others. On page 47 they observe that "all too often the intuitive form of spirituality, with its mysticism, mystery, and concentration on the unseen, is held up as the 'right' way to be spiritual." From my personal experience I would agree with this statement. I think it is helpful to realize that those with less intuitive personalities and more sensing personalities discover spirituality in different ways. I appreciated the format of the chapters. It gave the characteristics for that particular personality type and made suggestions of how people with those personalities might enhance their spirituality. It also gave suggestions of what might cause people with that personality type to struggle. Perhaps one of the most helpful sections of each chapter was the part that gave suggestions for how spiritual leaders or friends of that particular personality type could help them grow spiritually. After writing a chapter for each of the 16 personality types, Hirsh and Kise tie it all together in a well-written final chapter. They conclude that, "In spirituality, traveling down just one path can be the route to stagnation, offering little chance of surprise, challenge, or development" (page 241). Though each personality may have a certain way that they naturally approach spiritual issues, they can learn from each other and be inspired from how others seek spirituality and do soulwork. "Spiritual wholeness develops . . . when we allow for insights and information from spiritual experiences that are different from our initial, more natural paths" (page 241). What I appreciated about the concluding chapter is that they did not try to convince the reader to stop doing what comes natural to them. Instead they ask the reader to simply consider how meaningful other paths might be to other people and to consider trying these other types of soulwork on occasion to keep one's own faith fresh. The "key to understanding isn't adapting to everyone else - it is understanding the genuine psychological differences, comprehending the spiritual viewpoint of another, [and] gaining knowledge from a changed perspective" (page 243). While I may have struggled to understand all the psychological mumble jumble strung throughout the book, this final conclusion made perfect sense to me. This is something I can grasp and put into practice. This is something I can help those around me grasp and put into practice. Therefore, I am glad I read this book.
