- This should be required reading for High School and College students - heck, anyone under the age of 60. Brokaw does a marvelous job with these short insights into the people who built America up. Funny, sad, poignant - they run the gamut of emotions. I think people in the United States would be a lot happier and nicer to each other if they could find in themselves what this generation did.

- This is an outstanding book, documenting the quickly-decreasing generation of those who lived through WWII.
