Whatever 'ugliness' is, it remains a problematic category in architectural aesthetics - alternately vilified and appropriated, used either to shock or to invert conventions of architecture. This book presents sixteen new scholarly essays which rethink ugliness in recent architecture - from Brutalism to eclectic postmodern architectural productions - and together offer a diverse reappraisal of the history and theory of postmodern architecture and design. The essays address both broad theoretical questions on ugliness and postmodern aesthetics, as well as more specific analyses of significant architectural examples dating from the last decades of the twentieth century. The book attends to the diverse relations between the aesthetic register of ugliness and closely connected aesthetic concepts such as the monstrous, the ordinary, disgust, the excessive, the grotesque, the interesting, the impure and the sublime. This volume does not simply document the history of a postmodern anti-aesthetic through case studies. Instead, it aims to shed light on aesthetic problems that have been largely overlooked in the agenda of architectural theory. This book answers in detail the questions: How did postmodern architects appropriate troublesome contradictions bound to the raw ugliness of the real? How have the ugly and the antiaesthetic been a productive force in postmodern architecture? How can ugliness be of value to architecture? And how can architecture make good use of ugliness?

Writing, according to Panayotis Tournikiotis, has always exerted a powerful influence on architecture. Indeed, the study of modern architecture cannot be separated from a fascination with the texts that have tried to explain the idea of a new architecture in a new society. During the last forty years, the question of the relationship of architecture to its history -- of buildings to books -- has been one of the most important themes in debates about the course of modern architecture. Tournikiotis argues that the history of modern architecture tends to be written from the present, projecting back onto the past our current concerns, so that the "beginning" of the story really functions as a "representation" of its end. In this book the buildings are the quotations, while the texts are the structure. Tournikiotis focuses on a group of books by major historians of the twentieth century: Nikolaus Pevsner, Emil Kaufmann, Sigfried Giedion, Bruno Zevi, Leonardo Benevolo, Henry-Russell Hitchcock, Reyner Banham, Peter Collins, and Manfredo Tafuri. In examining these writers' thoughts, he draws on concepts from critical theory, relating architecture to broader historical models.

At the end of the Second World War, America's newly acquired status of hegemonic power -- together with the launch of ambitious international programs such as the Marshall Plan -- significantly altered existing transatlantic relations. In this context, Italian and American architectural cultures developed a fragile dialogue characterized by successful exchanges and forms of collaboration but also by reciprocal wariness. The dissemination of models and ideas concerning architecture generated complex effects and frequently led to surprising misinterpretations, obstinate forms of resistance and long negotiations between the involved parties. Issues of continuity and discontinuity dominated Italian culture and society at the time since at stake was the possible balance between allegedly long-established traditions and the prospect of a radical rupture with recent history. Architectural culture often contributed to reach a compromise between very diverging attitudes. Situated in the larger realm of studies on Americanization, this book questions current interpretations of transatlantic relations in architecture. By reconsidering the means and effects of the dialogue that unfolded between the two sides of the Atlantic during the postwar years, the volume analyzes how cultural and formal models were developed in one context and then modified when transferred to a new one as well as the fortune of this cultural exchange in terms of circulation, amplification, and simplification.

Il volume riunisce due iniziative sul rapporto tra l'architetto ferrarese Biagio Rossetti, di cui nel 2016 ricorreva il cinquecentenario della morte, e lo storico dell'architettura Bruno Zevi, che nel 2018 avrebbe compiuto cento anni: una mostra, ospitata nella sede della Fondazione Bruno Zevi a Roma, e un convegno, svoltosi nel salone d'onore di Palazzo Tassoni a Ferrara, riuniti sotto il comune denominatore Biagio Rossetti secondo Bruno Zevi. Se la mostra aggiorna e rivisita quella eretica del 1956 - Identità di Biagio Rossetti, tenutasi nel Ridotto del Teatro Comunale di Ferrara - curata da Zevi e allestita da Valeriano Pastor, il convegno riflette sul rapporto tra lo storico e la sua città di elezione. Entrambe le iniziative ci guidano a «saper vedere Biagio Rossetti» e la sua Ferrara Nova che, grazie a quel filtro critico, sarebbe diventata la sorprendente metafora della città storica a misura di una diversa e altrimenti possibile contemporaneità.

REVIEW OF BRUNO ZEV SAPER VEDERE L ARCHITETTURA

- This book is outrageously funny, the slightly confusing story line is worth the jokes, it becomes hard only near the end so there is no complain about that. But this book can get one interested.

- I found "Schilling" not the easiest book to read, but well worth the time and care. The prose is complex, often the syntax takes a second or even third read-through, but after awhile you get on to the rhythm of the story and it gets easier. For me, there were powerful echos of Chopin and Faulkner throughout; some might call it a southern novel in the poetic sense. I do. This is the story of a country doctor (Schilling) told from a number of angles. Most of it is set prior to WW II. The land is central to this book; indeed, I feel this book is a fair example of new-wave naturalism. This would be quite a book for someone thinking of teaching a creative writing class--and in need of new material. "Schilling" is the sort of literature that gets young writers to think about narrative form.
