REVIEW OF A OF STYLE FOR CONTRACT DRAFTING

- This isn't just one of the greatest sci-fi novels written, but one of the greatest novels ever written, period. The characters and believable, the situations intriguing and the science pretty much sound. Frank Herbert based most of his books around power struggles and how humans operate when given exceeding harsh conditions to survive in. Here you'll see parries within parries, fantastic interplays of action and diplomatic maneuvering that would make Machiavelli take some lessons. Paul Atreides still is one of the most brilliant characters ever to grace any book. He's brash, arrogant, and is going headlong into a situation that he knows will only end poorly for him in the end. It's a compassion for the people, a want for revenge, and a primal struggle to survive that eventually leads him to embrace the beginnings of the golden path. The Baron is a satisfying villain, and truly one of the most vile to be found in all literature. A lot of the likeable characters get killed off, as another positive point is that about everyone feels killable, which adds much to the suspense of the novel. Any sci-fi fan owe's himself to read this.

- Paul Atreides comes to the planet Arrakis, otherwise known as Dune, with his family. His father has a mission to harvest spice from the planet, but the Evil Harkonnen family takes over the "business" and kills Duke Leto Atreides, Paul's father. Paul goes into exile and meets the mysterious natives of Dune, the Fremen.
