REVIEW OF 500 SPANISH VERBS FOR DUMMIES

- I just finished reading Jan Karon's last book in The Mitford Series, A Light From Heaven, and I kept hoping it would never end. Every book in this series, in my estimation, was as good as, or better than, the previous one. The first one in her next series about Fr. Timothy Kavanaugh is on my bedside table; and even though I've just recently begun reading it, I can tell it's another great book by this lady! For those of you familiar with the Mitford Series, I have just bought my granddaughter the first of the children's books about Cynthia's sweet little white cat, Violet. Again, another wonderful book! Happy reading, Judy

- Like others, I had to force myself to read this book to the end as it was about characters I didn't really care about. The constant use of hymns, prayers and poetry was boring and perhaps a way to stretch the book to fulfill a publishing contract. It would have been far better to address readers' questions about Dooley, Kenny and Lace in the previous book and ended the series at that point.

This was a hugely disappointing book as the characters loved in Mitford made essentially brief and shallow appearances. Jan Karon herself appears to have been bored with Mitford and this lazy effort cheats the loyal reader of a satisfying end to the series. I will not be reading the Father Tim novels and believe Jan Karon's reputation is lessened by her milking the series this way. Don't waste your money. Check this one out of the library.
