REVIEW OF MICROELECTRONICS SEDRA SMITH 6TH EDITION SOLUTIONS MANUAL

- Short but thought-provoking. I picked it up because I've seen this title every time I read a review on an utopia/dystopia young adult book and was curious. I've read various books with very similar ideas (Delirium and Matched) of a society where everything has been decided for them to avoid suffering, wrong-doing and chaos; but is that a life worth living? No uncertainty but also no control. No suffering but also no passion. No choices, no freedom. Jonas was selected to be The Receiver of Memories of everybody that has ever existed so that people don't have to carry their burden. Only he will learn from these experiences and will have the wisdom to advice society on unprecedented matters. "The worst part of holding the memories is not the pain. It's the loneliness of it. Memories are meant to be shared." I had this interesting thought that this is how I feel about reading books. I experience someone else's memories or stories and it makes me wiser although they are situations I've never been through.

- The Giver was a mystery book. Some parts were hard to figure out and some were really interesting. The middle of the book was the best. When he became the Reciever and started recieving the memories. The ending of the book was sort of odd but sort cool. It was interesting how they came up with the plan to escape. I was glad that him and Gabrielle made it over the hill. My final opinion is that the book was neat and i liked it. It was a well written book.
