REVIEW OF ELECTRICAL CIRCUIT AND NETWORK NOTES POLYTECHNIC 3RD SEMESTER

- There is really no reasy avenue through which one can quantify the life or achievements of Mao Zedong, the leader of China's communist revolution and dictator from 1949 until his death in 1976. Unlike his contemporaries, Chairman Mao possessed a deep passion and credence for the ideology behind the politics unlike Stalin or Hitler."Quotations from Chairman Mao" presents a snapshot and perspective of this complicated man's view of not only the dynamics of politics and economics, but of human thought and instinct. While it would be fallacious to characterize Chairman Mao as a great philosopher of the modern age (a 20th century Karl Marx he was not), his insights are succinctly and poignantly expressed. Mao's gift for poetic license also pervades the work; had this man not been the galvanizing force behind a revolution, there is little doubt he would have been a poet or writer given his innate talent with the pen. Although the book is somewhat cyclical in content and at times redundant, it provides a priceless peek into the mind of the man that has undoubtedly altered the course of human history. For any literary or political scholar surfing for a source to supplement a thesis or simply get handle on the cyclone of modern political thought, "Quotations from Chairman Mao" is a must have addition to the bookshelf.

- This book does not have an index, so there is not an easy check to see how many times it defines its enemies as paper tigers, but as a guide to political thought, this book furnishes the best example. The list of Contents at the beginning shows 33 topics to be covered in its 313 pages, each drawn from a variety of texts, illustrating Mao's use of the concepts in his actual political practice. Somebody thought that everybody in China should know this stuff in order to conform to a system of thought which would allow them all to dare to struggle and dare to win. Topic 6, starting on page 72, is called "Imperialism and all Reactionaries are Paper Tigers." About two years after the Soviet weapons program dropped the first hydrogen bomb to be tested from an airplane (it worked), Mao said, "U.S. imperialism has not yet been overthrown and it has the atom bomb. I believe it will also be overthrown. It, too, is a paper tiger." (p. 75) My bet is on the paper tigers, and as long as anyone still thinks that imperialism could be overthrown, thousands of thermonuclear weapons are sure to dominate the picture. So people will know, we are not just paper tigers. Even David Koresh, who dared to preach in a church called Mount Carmel, ought to realize now that deep down we are nukers.
