REVIEW OF STUDY GUIDE AND SOLUTIONS MANUAL FOR ORGANIC CHEMISTRY 6TH EDITION BY BRUCE FREE DOWNLOAD

- I just got finished reading The Upper Room by Mary Monroe and I have to say that I really enjoyed it. I was looking throughout the bookstore one day and stumbled upon it. It really wasn't my 1st pick but I decided to give it a shot after reading God Don't Like Ugly and God Still Don't Like Ugly. I must say that the book really surprised me. When I first started reading the book I really wasn't that into it and would only pick it up when I was bored but by the end of the book I didn't want to put it down. I really like her style of writing and the book was really superb to me. I would recommend it to a friend.

- Feminist Nancy Chodorow takes an in-depth look at the role of "mothers" in society. Chodorow presents three common approaches to explain why women mother. In the end, she emerges, not surprisingly, favoring only one. Chodorow's first explanation is that mothering is a product of biology. Chodorow attacks this theory stating that genetic or sexual differences do not make a woman a better mother and that women do not have a motherly instinct any more than a father. Her argument is seriously found wanting. The second approach that Chodorow dismisses is the socio-anthropological view that mothering is a product of role-training. This view states that girls learn socially the role that they are to assume - that of mother. Chodorow disagrees that girls simply acquire this role in such an observant fashion. Chodorow believes that men and women can parent equally, but she feels that the differing relational needs developed in childhood are reproducing women as mothers in adulthood. Unfortunately, Chodorow completely dismisses the fact that men and women are different. Therefore, her theory is seriously flawed.
