REVIEW OF CHAPTER 4 TRIGONOMETRY BURLINGTON SCHOOL DISTRICT

- Having read all the reviews and endless adulation for this film, it's easy to see why the screenplay for Good Will Hunting snatched up an Oscar last year for Best Original Screenplay. Damon and Affleck have crafted an intelligent story that speaks volumes of humanity in the dialogue and character relationships. Characters are three-dimensional, flawed and compelling, forcing the audience to actually CARE what happens to them. The major strength of the script is the finely-crafted monologues that Damon and Affleck give their characters: i.e. Shawn's speech to Will in Boston park is simply beautiful. Then there's Will's speech to the NSA agents which combines humour and observation in one neat little package. The actor's performances stem from the sheer amount of subtext handed to them by Damon and Affleck in their script. Primarily, Will's path goes from frightened loud-mouth to assured and confident young man through his counseling sessions with Sean. These scenes are a joy to read as Will and Sean draw closer together by burying to the root of Will's struggle and for Sean to overcome past tragedies. Robin Williams at first seems like an odd choice for the role of Sean, but, for anyone who's seen DEAD POET'S SOCIETY will understand, approaches his role with vigour, inflecting Sean with wisdom, quiet solidarity and subtly conveys Sean's pain and anguish from a life of struggle. Also, Affleck gets a great speech near the end of the story when Chuckie tells Will to accept his gift and to follow his heart and to stop denying himself in the eyes of others, because he has something that not many people have. The script is also laced with some wonderful photographs from the film, which chart the progress of the story in pictures, and also includes a superb introduction from the film's director Gus Van Sant. The story is warm, deeply emotional and human, containing brilliant flashes of wit, pathos, observation and self-doubt, and I have no doubt that from this, Damon and Affleck will continue to rise and rise. Good Will Hunting reminds us that movies don't have to be about exploding asteroids, sinking ships or gratuitous car chases, they can be about the exploration of the human condition, where the guy gets the girl and has all the answers.

- This lady writer is daring and adorable. She possesses excellent skills at weaving magic with every book. I've read nearly the entire series already, and am in love with them all. With bated breath, I await Wren's story and Acheron's story. The men in these books are amazing. Incredibly sexy, handsome, and each one slightly different from the rest. And being loaded isn't a bad deal either. But it's their sensitiveness with regard to the lady of their dreams which nails it for me. The Gods, good, bad or indifferent, are an interesting treat as well. Zarek's story had me in tears, the absolute horror he grew up in quite possibly the worst of all the men in this series. And to think, that many of these hunky fellows didn't always have easy lives, or were even wanted. Even reading some of the books out of sequence hasn't proven to be a problem. Ms. Kenyon makes sure the reader knows what is going on, as it appears each book could do well in "stands alone" status. I look forward to many more years of enjoyment from this particular writer. :) Live Long and Prosper. Eternally, Lady Evyl aka Tonya Hall
