• From: Vennessa NgTo: Avid Readers <mumsathome@home.com>Subject: Do I have a book for you!Are you a stay-at-home mum? Do you often feel lonely, discouraged, driven crazy?Then pick up a copy of Meredith Efken's debut novel and lose yourself in the lives of the women who belong to the SAHM I AM e-mail loop.Scattered across America, these women share their joys and tears through e-mail, drawing support and encouragement from one another.Through a sub-loop called Green Eggs and Ham, we learn of five women and their struggles. There's Dulcie, whose husband who is constantly on out-of-town job assignments and a mother-in-law whose wedding is turning into a stage show. Artistic Zelia's desire for her children to express themselves is threatened by her husband's decision for them to attend school. Jocelyn is heartbroken when her son can't seem to shake normal childhood pains. Brenna must come to grips with farm life and her husband's desire for children. Completing the group is Phyllis, the pastor's wife whose youthful mistakes resurface to threaten her family's security.Let's not forget loop moderator Rosalyn and her sister, Veronica. Their insufferable relationship prompts many of Rosalyn's weekly topics for the e-mail loop. Will Veronica's latest bid for attention destroy the last fragments of their relationship?SAHM I AM is a laugh a minute. But don't get too comfortable; just as you settle into the fun pace of the story, Meredith turns things around and touches sensitive subjects.I found Meredith's e-mail message format refreshing. It effectively pulled me into the lives of the characters, cutting away use of description and narrative. The clever dialogue gives the story a more intimate feel. The lack of chapter breaks also makes the book very hard to put down.As a stay-at-home mom myself, I would recommend this book to any woman who chooses to remain home with her young children. The issues these women face ring true for any stay-at-home mom. Their stories will touch your heart to reveal the power of friendship via cyberspace, and this book may leave you longing for your own SAHM I AM e-mail loop.

• I had a copy of this book when I was a little girl, and I loved it. It is a slightly disturbing story of a lonely, needy doll who more than anything doesn't want to be alone, and makes friends with two teddy bears.It's primarily a picture book of photographs of Edith, the doll, and her two teddy bear friends posed in scenes to help tell the story.As much as I like this book, I don't think that it's for everyone. Even when I was four or five years old I knew that something wasn't quite right with the story and that Edith was a little desperate. There is a dark quality to the mood of some of the pictures and Edith has some abandonment issues. There is a part in the book where Mr. Bear spans Edith (Edith over Mr. Bear's knees with skirts up and doll panties showing). Edith says she doesn't care about the spanking, as long as Mr. Bear doesn't leave. There was a book written about Dare Wright (AKA- Edith) and apparently she was abandoned by her father and brother (played by Mr. Bear and Little Bear) and well...you get the picture. (no pun intended) So, if you are a bit dark and twisted, like me, you will probably dig this book and the other Lonely Doll books. Maybe even check out the biography on Dare. If you are looking for a book for your child, the pictures are interesting, but be aware that it's a story about a maladjusted doll.
