REVIEW OF HORRID HENRY AND THE SECRET CLUB

- A fantasy written long ago in 1887, 20,000 Leagues Under the Sea started almost an entire genre of fantasy with submarines like the Tom Clancy novels. In this story ships all over the world claim to have seen a mysterious shifting black reef. Many thought it was just a rumor until it bore a hole into the hull of a steamer that had been able to make it back to shore. Pierre Arronax, a French biology expert, and his servant are invited on a ship going to hunt this creature. When the ship sunk, they found themselves captive on the creature that turned out to be a submarine, and its captain, Nemo, a genius who despised human society, showed them the wonders of the depths. Slow and plodding, 20,000 Leagues Under the Sea does not match the excitement of more contemporary fantasy fiction. One reason that this book did not appeal to me is that, compared to the other fantasy book that I am reading, The Fires of Heaven by Robert Jordan, the characters and events are dull and boring. For example, a protagonist in The Fires of Heaven, Mat Cauthon, has two intriguing aspects. One is his incredible luck in games of chance. The other, most fascinating aspect, is that he has vivid memories of lives lived in the distant past. There is no character in the Jules Vern novel that can compare to such a riveting figure. Jules Vern's novel is flat and unimaginative in contrast to Robert Jordan's work. I was told it was a classic, but I was disappointed by its quality of creativity. I would not recommend this book to anyone who enjoys fantasy fiction.

- In one word, the book "Be a Contender, Not Just a Contestant," is AWESOME!!!! If you're a saved believer, it will challenge you to get to the top of your faith; If you're NOT saved, it will give you the "RECIPE" to get saved! A wonderful and easy read for your whole family. May the Lord continue to bless this book so that many others internationally might receive. Gale Turner, Lawton, Oklahoma
