REVIEW OF WORLD
CIVILIZATIONS
5TH EDITION

- I bought this book because my sister said I needed to read it. And she was right, it is a book I would recommend it to everyone. I am excited to read the next book in the series.

- "Treason's Harbour", the ninth installment in the Aubrey/Maturin series, is set soon after the events chronicled in "The Ionian Mission", with Aubrey, Maturin and the crew of HMS Surprise enjoying some rest in Malta, while the battered frigate undergoes repairs. Unbeknownst to Maturin, his identity as a British intelligence agent has been unmasked by a civilian official working at the Admiralty who is one of Napoleon's British moles. He finds himself involved romantically with Laura Fielding, the wife of a Royal Navy captain captured by the French, who unwittingly works on behalf of Napoleon's secret service. Aubrey is entrusted with secret orders from the Admiralty's mole which will result unexpectedly in the death of his long-time nemesis Rear Admiral Harte. And both he and Maturin will find themselves in several exciting adventures in Algeria and Egypt. I'll admit that this is not the most exciting tale in the Aubrey/Maturin series with regards to sea battles. Instead, "Treason's Harbour" works best as a Napoleonic version of a John Le Carre novel, with Aubrey and Maturin trying to outwit their French secret agent pursuers. It remains an important installment in this saga simply by setting some of the behind-the-scenes political and espionage skullduggery which will set the course for much of the latter half of this saga. Once more O'Brian shines in offering some more of his elegant 19th Centuriesque prose.
