REVIEW OF CMRP EXAM PREPARATION

- This is an excellent series. The author has made the characters come alive and made the readers feel like they are living with them. I'm impressed by the author's attention to biblical detail: even characters mentioned only once or twice in Scripture (such as Hephzibah) are included in the story. She has also done her homework, and even with all the imagination that goes into a historical fiction series, the story remains true to what COULD have happened, i.e. it is biblically, historically, and culturally accurate. The author has paid attention to the Old Testament as a whole, not just the accounts of the kings themselves, but also which prophets were alive at the time, and the Laws of Moses that Hezekiah and the other characters would have (or should have) been following and how those laws would have affected their lives. I have often found myself looking up in the biblical account to compare it to the book, and being surprised to find that some of the key characters of the book, such as Hephzibah, Zechariah, Hilkiyah, and Shebna, are actually named in Scripture. Of course, they may not have been exactly as the author describes them, but this series is a good reminder to me that even these people about whom we know so little did really have lives and families, and faced choices and good and bad times, just as I do. Which is, I suppose, one of the purposes of a historical fiction series!

- This book is so mesmerizing! Try "Perla at the Mexican Border..." (p. 41): Her job was to sort through the eyes/ of dolls. Snapping hollow limbs/ into plastic torsos had been a soothing task/ for Perla, like arranging the peas into the pod/ Beautiful imagery in very simple moments. Gonzalez doesn't take anything for granted. Small moments become big ones. This is exemplary poetry. I recommend this to everyone I know!!! The NPS made a great choice!
