REVIEW OF 8826818398 IT19

- I am a water efficiency consultant. I am fascinated and amazed by the magical beauty of water. But I also recognize that there are many scientific principles that govern the behavior of water. That science does not detract from the beauty and mystery of water for me. I do not need to throw science out the window to appreciate that beauty but apparently many others do. I once watched a 2 hour slide show and talk by Mr. Emoto, hoping to ask questions. He refused to take any questions afterwards, even though I had plenty. Where are the side by side comparisons of the ice structure of the same water that did not have the word or picture influences? Until similar photos are created with a control group and with the involvement of neutral 3rd party scientists, I can not believe any of the claims. But I will always have a childlike amazement at the endless beauty and mystery of water.

- I had a friend approach me about this topic so I started looking into it. I've read his website (<http://www.masaru-emoto.net>) and all of the people who support this work. I have not been able to find one bit of real science in any of it. Please don't waste your money on this book as it is all nonsense. I have nothing against mystical ideas, they are just not science. The issue I have with this guy is not that he claims that a glass of water can make pretty crystals when you say "I love you" to it. It's the conclusions that are drawn about the human body. If you rely souly on good thoughts, your cancer is not going to go away, no matter how much water is in the human body. This is not science, a proper experiment was not done to produce the results that Emoto got. I challenge any one of you to reproduce the results that Emoto produced. He claims that a polluted glass of water with the word "love" written on it will clean itself up, and a second glass of the same water with "hate" written on it will get dirtier. What language can water read? Or is it the mystical "vibrations" that you send to the glass of water that do the cleaning? What happens if you write "love" but think "hate"? Will the water be confused? Be logical about this and don't be taken for a fool by people like Masaru Emoto. He is making tons of money off of people who want to believe in something more than science. If that's the case with you, I'm sure there's a church around the corner. Be a critical thinker, James
