REVIEW OF WISH EXERCISE 1 SEONAIID

- Power! imagination! drama! a masterpiece! Those are but a few of the superlatives that describe this book. Saying the least, Dune is the best si-fi book of all times. An unparalleled saga painted on the vast canvas of Herbert's imagination in vivid colors, but that metaphor is only a two-dimensional view of a manifold work. It's a complete Herbertian Universe with all the detail and intricacy of reality. No si-fi author gets close to the perfection he achieved here. The plot, or should I say plots, twist and turn in completely unpredictable ways, like the non-rhythmic dance of the Fremen. I am yet to see another author that eludes anticipation like Herbert. The intrigue! The sophistication! So exquisite! The cast of larger-than-life figures in classical rolls, the Hero and the Villain, the Tragic and the Noble, Arch-typical yet not stereotypical. A unique writing style combining the broad objective view point of third person account, with the subjective "thoughts" of first person. Not to mention the scope and the breath, Herbert plays out philosophical and political, environmental and religious themes with unmatched canny. He was a thinker way ahead of his time, way ahead of OUR time! Maybe future generations will appreciate his full genius. I can not think of any other book that surpasses Dune, with the possible exception of "God Emperor of Dune" on greater philosophical and political depth. No si-fi fan that respects himself could miss reading this book, but it really is a classic you all should read. "The truth carries the ambiguity of the word used to express it" (Frank Herbert -- 'God Emperor of Dune')

- The late, great, Frank Herber's "Dune" is a classic in the true sense of the word. I've read many wonderful novels (2001, Stranger in a Strange Land, Foundation, Hyperion, Ender's Game, etc, etc.--classics all) that will stay with me for life, but none `wormed' its way in so deeply as "Dune". Herbert's masterpiece works on so many different levels, it would take another novel just to describe the depth. I won't lie to anyone, when I first picked up this novel many, many years ago and took a look at the dictionary, I began to wonder what I got myself into. This isn't a `light' read. However, Herbert hooked me on the first page and never let go. For me personally, this novel had everything a great classic should have, including stunningly rich, vibrant characters (something most sci-fi novels grievously lack). Granted, there are many that may not like this novel as much as I do, but I believe "Dune" is the standard by which all science fiction novels should be judged, and the goal all authors should try to attain--a quite daunting task, I might add. After many years (and a few failed attempts), "Dune" was made into a movie. Now I know that most people didn't like the movie (me included), but let's be fair. How does anyone make a successful movie of a novel that has so many intricate layers? While I thought the casting was first-rate and the costumes authentic, the task before them was monumental (and, alas, the special effects were `cheesy' at best). The movie tried desperately to be true to Herbert's vision, but it just cannot be done, and probably should never have been attempted. Between 1 and 10, "Dune" gets a solid 10. This is the only 10 I have given any novel, because no novel I have yet read matches the artistic depth and richness of Frank Herbert's "Dune".
