REVIEW OF RASCAL FLATTS BLESS THE BROKEN ROAD SHEET MUSIC IN C

- Not something you normally navigate but would be nice. Also the "Index" in back of paper edition is not there. It was a very handy supplement. It lets one find section related to a specific Scripture.
- I must admit, for the first time, I'm reviewing a book I have not actually read. I did, however, read Jacob M. Braude's "New Treasury of Stories for Every Speaking and Writing Occasion," Prentice Hall, Inc., Englewood Cliffs, NJ, June 1961 obtainable used through Amazon but no longer published. So, I'm taking a leap of faith that this book is an update to the one I've read. I collect quotes as a hobby, and Braude provides the finest short, speaker's stories I've found in one place. Here are just a few examples:When Thomas Jefferson presented his credentials as U.S. minister to France, the French premier remarked, "I see that you have come to replace Benjamin Franklin." "I have come to succeed him," corrected Jefferson. "No one can replace him." p. 336There is a monument in Gettysburg to honor the memory of a color-bearer who became isolated from his regiment after a charge. The regiment retired, but the color-bearer and several men held their ground. The Major sent a messenger through to the boy, "Bring the colors back to the regiment." The boy replied, "Bring the regiment back to the colors." George W. Olinger, p. 84After President Coolidge issued his famous "I do not choose to run" statement, he was besieged by reporters seeking a more detailed statement. One more persistent than his fellows followed Mr. Coolidge to the door of his library. "Exactly why don't you want to be President again, Mr. Coolidge?" he asked. Coolidge turned and looked him squarely in the eye, "Because," he answered, "there's no chance for advancement," p. 17Also, some humor mixed with wisdom:Once a week the road-sweeper came by with his brush. He was a friendly old fellow; and Miss Gidding at the Hollies, got into the habit all that summer of taking him a glass of lemonade and a slice of cake. He thanked her shyly, and that was all. But one evening there came a knock at the back door of the Hollies. The road-sweeper was there, a cauliflower in one hand and a bunch of sweet peas in the other. He seemed embarrassed as he said, "I've brought you these, ma'am, for your kindness." "Oh, you shouldn't," exclaimed Miss Gidding, "It was nothing." And then, the road-sweeper said an odd thing. "Well, no," he agreed, "maybe it wasn't much, really ma'am. But it was more than anybody else did." (From 500 Tales to Tell Again, H. L. Gee, Ed., London Epworth Press), p. 161A professor who has taught for many years was counseling a young teacher. "You will discover," he said, "that in nearly every class there is a youngster eager to argue. Your first impulse will be to silence him. I advise you to think carefully before doing so. He probably is the only one listening." p. 382.)And ones that really make you think:In a talk to the graduating class at Smith College, Adlai Stevenson once told his listeners that the "self-adjusted" people who fit painlessly into the social pattern may not be the most valuable citizens. "While I am not in favor of maladjustment," he added, "I view this cultivation of neutrality, this breeding of mental neuters, this hostility to eccentricity with grave misgiving. One looks back with dismay at the possibility of Shakespeare perfectly adjusted to bourgeois life in Stratford, Wesley contentedly administering a county parish, George Washington going to London to receive a barony from George III, or Abraham Lincoln prospering in Springfield with nary a concern for the preservation of the crumbling union. What is needed," continued Mr. Stevenson, "is not just well-adjusted, well-balanced personalities, not just better groupies and conformers but more idiosyncratic, unpredictable characters; people who take open eyes and open minds out with them into the society which they will share and help to transform." p. 281An old man was living with his son at an abandoned fort on the top of a hill, and one day he lost a horse. The neighbors came to express their sympathy for this misfortune, and the old man asked, "How do you know this is bad luck?" A few days afterwards, his horse returned with a number of wild horses, and his neighbors came again to congratulate him on this stroke of fortune, and the old man replied, "How do you know this is good luck?" With so many horses around, his son began to take to riding, and one day he broke his leg. Again the neighbors came around to express their sympathy, and the old man replied, "How do you know this is bad luck?" The next year there was a war, and because the old man's son was crippled, he did not have to go to the front. (George Kao, Chinese Wit & Humor, Coward-McCann, 1946, p. 224He also included a number of fine short quotations:A proverb is a short sentence based on long experience. Miguel de Cervantes, p. 315A man would do nothing, if he waited until he could do it so well that no one at all would find fault with what he has done. Cardinal Newman, p. 274Everybody thinks of changing humanity and nobody thinks of changing himself. Count Leo Tolstoy, p. 353Only a mediocre writer is always at his best. W. Somerset Maugham, p. 40If you cannot say what you have to say in 20 minutes, you should go away and write a book about it. Lord Brabazon, p. 320Good management consists of showing average people how to do the work of superior people. (John D. Rockefeller, p. 57And my favorite quotation in the book:Present suffering is not enjoyable, but life would be worth little without it. The difference between iron and steel is fire, but steel is worth all it costs. Iron ore may think itself senselessly tortured in the furnace, but when the watch spring looks back, it knows better. Rufus Babcock, p. 17And my very favorite story of all:Walking down a country lane, a man heard his little granddaughter from the other side of a large bush. She was repeating the alphabet-A, B, C, D, E, but in an oddly reverent sort of way. He waited until she was through and then walked around to find her. "What were you doing?" he asked. "I was praying," she answered. "I couldn't think of the right words, so I just said the letters, and God will put them together into the words, because He knows what I was thinking." (Robert E. Goodrich, Jr., What's It All About, Fleming H. Revell Co., p. 300
