REVIEW OF TRANSLATIONS BRIAN FRIEL SCRIPT BING PDFSDIR

• This is a utopian story that is written in a style and language understandable by all ages, even those as young as sixth grade. The main idea revolves around the concept of a perfect society and what must be sacrificed in order to achieve that, most significantly personal freedom and expression. A uniform, restricted, colorless, apathetic, malevolent society ironically results from the attempt to create an ideal community. Younger readers may be particularly shocked by the lack of regard for human life.

• The Giver-a book dealing with the possible development of societies searching for perfection. Jonas, a twelve year old boy, lives in such a community, whose only aim is to achieve sameness and free its citizens of wrong decisions. Throughout his development as a "Receiver Of Memory" he finds out the faults and mistakes of the system. Lois Lowry illustrates Jonas`development very carefully and it seems as if she actually once lived in that community. The book does never seem exaggerated, it only describes a possible way our lifes could one time look like. She includes criticism in cloning, A.I. and change of DNA in "The Giver". It is not only a science-fiction book, but also a scream for showing more feelings in our computer-ruled society of today.
