REVIEW OF PMBOK 5TH EDITION ISBN

- Although this book was published as a companion to a museum exhibition, it is one of the few volumes available on the important subject of post-WWII art and design in America. There are many books to be found about individual artists and designers of the period, but hardly any cover the era from as broad a perspective as this one. This is quite an oversight considering that the art and design that emerged during this time succeeded in putting

America at the forefront of the art world for the first time in history. Among the iconic artists, designers and other innovators you will find in the book are Raymond Loewy, Ray & Charles Eames, Isamu Noguchi, Russell Wright, Jackson Pollock, Lee Krasner, Willem De Kooning, Georgia O'Keeffe, Earl Tupper and Morris Lapidus; and the book is heavily illustrated with their unforgettably influential imagery: Eames chairs, Noguchi coffee tables, the Formica boomerang pattern, the Fontainebleau Hotel, Russell Wright and Eva Zeisel tableware, Jack Lenor Larsen fabrics, the Cadillac Biarritz, the Predicta television, hula hoops and kidney-shaped swimming pools. It is a fun and highly informative book about the ever-fascinating art and design of one of the most important periods in the whole of American art history

- I recall this being not quite as wonderful as the others have described, but certainly rather good. The fact that this has to do with a school and the possibility of the murderer being one of the children was particularly horrifying--but not out of Dame Christie's reach. In fact, I was expecting this to be focused on a more psychological view-point, something reminiscent of Endless Night or Crooked House. However, this was nothing more than a harmless novel with murder, murderer, and motive--the only difference its being in a school. I suppose the only reason I gave this 4 stars is because I was quite anticipating something different. But who can blame me? After all, the potential for a psychologically horrifying mystery was certainly there.
