REVIEW OF AP MICROECONOMICS REVIEW WITH ANSWERS

- The novel Lord of the Flies written by William Golding is astonishingly well made with details of what it is like to live and survive without government and rules/society. Ralph, 13 year old protagonist who led a normal life; his life hit a tragic down spiral when he was in a plane with his Boy Scout troop heading on a tour of tropical islands. Their plane failed to fly and crashed into the ocean with no adult survivors. Ralph encounters many conflicts such as person vs. person, as in the time when he and Jack fought with closed fists until one of them gets hurt person vs. nature, like the time when the raging hurricane whips through their island and destroys everything in it's path and lastly person vs. self, when Ralph doubts himself and is stressing his decisions. Many of the camp members turn against him and go out on their own, it is up to Ralph to stay alive and help his companions, but can he tame a lawless beast like the hunters? I found this novel flawless and exhilarating; William Golding did a truly great job on this awesome novel. The author made me feel Ralph's pain and also made me feel Jack's anger. It made me feel as if I was one of the boys in the group, choosing which side to take, the hunters or Ralph. I felt the joy the hunters had when they killed their first pig, and their fear when they encountered the beast. I found myself reasoning with the hunter's plans but saw the point of Ralph's logic to stick together. I felt the shocking thunder and the clash of waves during the hurricane and felt the adrenaline rushing through my body. Even though all of these things were great I also saw some flaws in the book. I felt as if the wild pig detail was kind of weird; how that in the middle of the ocean on a deserted tropical island there would be pigs, other than that one detail I felt the book was magnificent.

- The book "Lord of the flies" starts out with a group of British boys that are stranded on an uninhabited island. Things start out great and the boys assign each other jobs and responsibilities. The leader of the tribe is a boy named Ralph. But soon the boys become to interested in hunting and Jack (another boy in the tribe) decides to start his own tribe. Ralph is ok with this move because he thinks that Jack will come back to the group soon. But Jack doesn't ever come back to the group and ends up killing Simon (a member of Ralph's group). Jack's tribe is becoming violent and very savage-like. When Ralph confronts Jack's group about restoring peace and finding ways to get off the island, another member of Ralph's group gets killed (a boy named Piggy). Now Jack's group wants to get Ralph out of the picture and try to kill him, but right before they are going to do him in a Navel officer comes onto the island and stops the madness. I believe that the theme of this novel is evilness in children. This is the main because it is stated throughout the entire story. Golding shows and believes that children are born with evil and society makes us nice and polite. Golding also symbolizes this concept in many ways. One of these major symbols is Jack. Jack is relatively nice at first but as the story progresses and more chaos and fear is developed he becomes more aggressive and evil. Another symbol is Piggy. Piggy was the symbol of intelligence and knowledge. When he was killed, it was Golding's way of saying that without rules and guidelines evil will always conquer good. After reading the book I could say that I really enjoyed the book and it got me thinking about what life is really about.
