Children in today's world are inundated with information about who to be, what to do and how to live. But what if there was a way to teach children how to manage priorities, focus on goals and be a positive influence on the world around them? The Leader in Me is that programme. It's based on a hugely successful initiative carried out at the A.B. Combs Elementary School in North Carolina. To hear the parents of A. B Combs talk about the school is to be amazed. In 1999, the school debuted a programme that taught The 7 Habits of Highly Effective People to a pilot group of students. The parents reported an incredible change in their children, who blossomed under the programme. By the end of the following year the average end-of-grade scores had leapt from 84 to 94. This book will launch the message onto a much larger platform. Stephen R. Covey takes the 7 Habits, that have already changed the lives of millions of people, and shows how children can use them as they develop. Those habits - - be proactive, begin with the end in mind, put first things first, think win-win, seek to understand and then to be understood, synergize, and sharpen the saw -- are critical skills to learn at a young age and bring incredible results, proving that it's never too early to teach someone how to live well.

Museums as Agents for Social Change is the first comprehensive text to examine museum practice in a decolonised moment, moving beyond known roles of object collection and presentation. Drawing on studies of Mutare museum, a regional museum in Eastern Zimbabwe, this book considers how museums with inherited colonial legacies are dealing with their new environments. The book provides an examination of Mutare museum's activism in engaging with topical issues affecting its surrounding community and Chipangura and Mataga demonstrate how new forms of engagement are being deployed to attract new audiences, whilst dealing with issues such as economic livelihoods, poverty, displacement, climate change and education. Illustrating how recent programmes have helped to reposition Mutare museum as a decolonial agent of social change and an important community anchor institution, the book also demonstrates how other museums can move beyond the colonial preoccupation with the gathering of collections, conservation and presentation of cultural heritage to the public. Museums as Agents for Social Change will primarily be of interest to academics and students working in the fields of museum and heritage studies, history, archaeology and anthropology. It should also be appealing to museum professionals around the world who are interested in learning more about how to decolonise their museum.

REVIEW OF CHDA STUDY GUIDE

- This is a wonderfully helpful book that enables you to organize your time and your life in quick, simple, practical steps. I like it, its useful no matter what life changes you might want to make. It inspired me to keep moving on to the next level to achieve my goals, and I will be able to use it over and over again for the rest of my life.

- I recommend this book to anyone who is a little bit concerned about where we're headed as a nation. I was especially impressed with the author's analysis of US debt in the last third of the book. This, I think, is most scary; the fact that we are subsidizing our lifestyle with money borrowed from other nations against our future - and our children's future! I'm not as concerned as Phillips seems to be about the Christian Right - I think the American public is tired of them. And I have a great deal of confidence in the ability of new immigrant groups to keep us from the fates of early 20th c. Britain and the like. The author doesn't talk about this aspect of American culture, but I think it's an important and unique one. But if you think that the current occupants of the senior federal branch are self-serving, cynical and dull-witted, this book will not dissuade you!
