REVIEW OF INQUIRY INTO LIFE 10TH EDITION ANSWER KEY

- Henderson is a treasure to discover. One of the pioneering women writers of sci-fi, and a Hugo Award winner, she crafted these beautifully moving stories in the 1950s, all connected here in the framework of a novel, that have the authentic emotional kick of any contemporary novel. Also, forget the weird cover - it's got nothing to do with the events of the book, and way off in its eerie tone. The setting is out west, where lost teenagers and small town teachers find themselves tested and connected in ways they weren't even aware could be. The stories are full of moving scenes of confusion and compassion, and the central theme is of people unfolding into their gifts. Henderson was a teacher herself, and you can feel how she wanted to lift her students out of the limited confines of their doubts and fears. The basis is science fiction, but it plays out more as stories of sensitives, telepathics, and healers discovering how what's tortured them for so long is actually a mark of their gifts. I discovered Henderson when reading up on

Alexander Key, who was strongly influenced by Henderson and later wrote "Escape to Witch Mountain." It's very much the same story, with the scattered survivors of a UFO crash generations ago trying to find each other in a world that only fears them. Here's an excerpt.***"There's a doctor at the Tumble A Ranch," Joel said faintly. "He's taking a vacation." "Go get him." I held Joel with my eyes. "Go as fast as you know how!" Joel gulped miserably. "Okay." "They'll probably have horses to come back on," I said. "Don't be too obvious." "Okay," and he ran out the door. We heard the thud of his running feet until he was halfway across the schoolyard, then silence. Faintly, seconds later, creek gravel crunched below the hill. I could only guess at what he was doing--that he couldn't lift all the way and was going in jumps whose length was beyond all reasonable measuring.***The name of that story is "Pottage," and you can find it online. Here's another excerpt.***"No telling how many others there are all over the world waiting to be found." "Hiding, you mean," I said. "You don't go around asking to be found. Not after the first few reactions you get. Oh, maybe in the first fine flush of discovery you hurry to share the wonder, but you learn quickly enough to hide."***Such longing for connection and understanding is something we can all relate to, and Henderson goes deep in the telling. (There's also a new collection of her stories, Ingathering: The Complete People Stories of Zenna Henderson. It has all seventeen of the People stories, including a new one, but its cover is even more weird.)

- "Science Process Skills OFFERS YOUR STUDENTS CHALLENGING OPPORTUNITIES TO DEMONSTRATE what they are able to do as a result of their science experiences. These hands-on activities are inexpensive and flexible enough to use with individuals, small groups, or an entire class...."[from the book of the back cover]
