This collection offers empirical studies and theoretical essays about human communication in everyday life. The writings come from many of the world's leading researchers and cut across academic boundaries, engaging scholars and teachers from such disciplines as communication, sociology, anthropology, linguistics, and education. Chapters emphasize empirical, qualitative studies of people's everyday uses of talk-in-interaction, and they feature work in such areas as sociolinguistics, conversation analysis, discourse analysis, and ethnography. The volume is dedicated to and highlights themes in the work of the late Robert Hopper, an outstanding scholar in communication who pioneered research in Language and Social Interaction (LSI). The contributors examine various features of human interaction (such as laughter, vocal repetition, and hand gestures) occurring naturally within a variety of settings (at a dinner table, a doctor's office, an automotive repair shop, and so forth), whereby interlocutors accomplish aspects of their interpersonal or institutional lives (resolve a disagreement, report bad medical news, negotiate a raise, and more), all of which may relate to larger social issues (including police brutality, human spirituality, death, and optimism). The chapters in this anthology show that social life is largely a communicative accomplishment and that people constitute the social realities experienced every day through small and subtle ways of communicating, carefully orchestrated but commonly taken for granted. In showcasing the diversity of contemporary LSI research, this volume is appropriate for scholars and graduate students in language and social interaction, communication, sociology, research methods, qualitative research methods, discourse analysis, conversation analysis, linguistics, and related areas.

REVIEW OF CLEAR PRONOUN REFERENCE A ANSWERS KEY

- Brave New World, Aldous Huxley [1894-1963]; Harper & Brother (1932; First Perennial Classic [HarperCollins Publishers paperback edition] 1998) Mustapha Mond, first quoting Cardinal Newman [UK, 1801-90]; then the philosopher Maine de Biran [France, 1766-1824]; then explaining to the Savage (John) that every negative thing that would formerly build character had been eliminated for the citizens of the world in After Ford 632 (pp. 232-40): [Newman] " 'We are not our own... we did not make ourselves, we cannot be supreme over ourselves... that we are our own? It may be thought by the young & prosperous. These [they] may think it a great thing to have everything... their own way - to depend on no one... But as time goes on, they, as all men, will find that independence was not made for man - that it... will not carry us safely to the end...' [Biran] " 'The religious sentiment tends to develop as we grow older; to develop because, as the passions calm... our reason becomes less troubled in its working, less obscured by the images, desires & distractions, in which it used to be absorbed; whereupon God emerges... our soul feels, sees, turns toward the source of all light... for now that all that gave to the world of sensations its life & charms has begun to leak away from us...' " Mustapha Mond shut the book... 'One of the numerous things... that these philosophers didn't dream about was this... us, the modern world.' [Probably quoting Newman:] " 'You can only be independent of God while you've got youth & prosperity; independence won't take you safely to the end.' " Well, we've now got youth & prosperity right up to the end. What follows? Evidently, that we can be independent of God. 'The religious sentiment will compensate us for all our losses.' But there aren't any losses for us to compensate; religious sentiment is superfluous. And why should we go hunting for a substitute for youthful desires, when youthful desires never fail?... What need have we of... consolation, when we have soma?... "And there's always soma to calm your anger, to reconcile you to your enemies, to make you patient & long-suffering. In the past, you could only accomplish these things by making a great effort & after years of hard moral training. Now you swallow two or three half-gramme tablets... Anyone can be virtuous now..." ***** They exist everywhere on earth. But in my lifetime (probably by default because I had left my home town of New York City, for good, in 1994), they made the greatest impression in 2007, in California, north of San Diego at the renowned race track, Del Mar: The 50-year-old teenagers, the plastic surgery-processed men & women whose flamboyant insignificance & amber-encased, recycled teenage preening fueled much of the animation in the paddock before each race. It was a scary sight, ever more so potent because of its contrast to what was admirable in the same environment: the adults of various ages whose hard-won maturity & tempered cadence of speech suggested their survival after episodes of unavoidable adversity. (As a rule of thumb, they tended to be the ones presenting the show & running the business: the trainers, grooms, ushers, waiters, tellers, & other employees of the track. But no generalization, however sincere, can faithfully depict such a complicated spectrum of so many people at such a sizeable arena. Still, the impression persists.) Aldous's Brave New World survived its own initial adverse reviews in the 1930s & rightly remains a classic - one that I first read in the 1960s & then again only recently, well over forty years later. How amazing it was that as the re-reading progressed, so much of it had not been forgotten; so little of it has been debunked. Post Note (12/08/12): Kyle Smith's article (NY Post April 29, 2012) on Huxley's remarkable prescience - and how, often, he had overestimated how much coercion, if any, it would take to get people in the 26th Century to cooperate with the omnipotent rulers of the Brave New World - is recommended [...]

- Maybe I was not in right frame of mind when I read the novel, or I should not have read Orwell's 1984 so soon before, but I found Huxley's novel too tedious, complex, subtle and unengaging. By itself, BNW would be a 5 star novel, however compared to 1984, it just does not match up. Its character development, character relationships... are too odd, weak and unbelievable. Its technological jargon is perplexing, and so on. It was not a completely horrific novel, but not the best. Perhaps one day, when I am in my 20's... 30's or 40's, I shall pick up another copy and just adore it. Perhaps.
