REVIEW OF CAMPBELL

BIOLOGY 10TH EDITION PDF PDF PINTEREST

- Everybody in the whole world must read this book! It will make you think twice before you complain about something!

- Demetria Hughes Book Report Man's Search for Meaning The title of the book is Man's Search for Meaning by Victor Frankl. He explains his experiences in a concentration camp. In his book he explains the experiences which led to his discovery of logotherapy and his main premise details why life holds a potential meaning under any condition. The main premises and conclusions are:* Do not aim at success the more you aim at it and make if a target the more you are going to miss it* Three things prisoners felt upon entering concentration camps shock, apathy, and delusion* When they say a prisoner smoking his own cigarettes they knew he had given up on faith* Frankl wasn't one of those whom shock of admission greatly depressed. He smiled at a prisoner who told him he was in danger* Dreams were more of a regression at retreat to a more primitive form of mental life. His wishes and desires became obvious in his dreams* Sensitive people were able to retreat from their terrible surroundings to a life of inner riches and spiritual freedom and survived better than those of robust native* He understood how a man who has nothing left still may know bliss be it only for a brief moment in the contemplation of his beloved* He says love goes beyond physical person it finds its deepest meaning in spiritual being his innerself, whether or not their alive is of no importance. Fate was one's master and that one must not try to influence it in any way* They did not bare their sufferings with a genuine achievement. There is one thing I dread not to be worthy of my sufferings* It is this spiritual freedom which can not be taken away that makes life meaningful and purposefully correct* A man who could not see the end of his provisional existence was not able to aim at an ultimate goal in life.

Therefore his inner life changed regarding our provisional existence as unreal was in itself an important factor in causing prisoners to lose their hold on life* Emotion ceases to be suffering as soon as we form a clear and precise picture of it* He who has a why to live can bear any how* If someone knows why they want to live you will be able to deal with whatever it takes to live* Life ultimately means taking responsibility to find right answers to its problems and to fulfill the tasks which it constantly sets for each individual* For tears bear witness that a man had the greatest of courage, the courage to suffer* He talks about commonplace truth no one has right to do wrong not even if wrong has been done to them* Person whose memory alone had given him courage in camp did not exist anymore when the day of his dreams finally came he found it so different from all he had longed for* How do we examine what we think what are we trying to unmask in concentration camp the people became who they were deep down there is a way in which we as people are unmasking certain opinion* Bear witness to the uniquely human potential at its best which is to transform a personal tragedy into a triumph to turn one's predicament into a human achievement* Live as if you were living already for the second time and as if you had acted the first time as wrongly as you are about to act now* Just because life has no meaning we do not sit back and do nothing the fact that we are in the world serves no purpose* Human being is not in pursuit of happiness but rather in search of a reason to become happy and through actualizing the potential meaning inherent dormant in a given situation* Emotion are meaningful reasonable or unreasonable as they conform to reason or fail to conform. Heart never takes place of head but should obey it I believe all of his arguments are good however he does make a few mistakes. Frankl talks about determinism and how man needs this, but determinism is self refuting that's how it falls on this principal. He also say how the heart should never take place of head but if it didn't he would not have made it through those camps He uses the emotions as a way for man to deal with the hard life of the concentration camps. Frankl commits no fallacy but points one out about two wrongs not making it right as a way to compensate for what has happen to the prisoners. I think he is very fair in the since that he does not talk bad about the abuse nor does he present his argument as a person who has been brutally beaten in a concentration camp. When I first read this book I was a little upset because I felt like the voices of the people who died and suffered in these camps were not heard. Later as I went through to evaluate the argument I realized how important it was to understand it like Frankl had mention He uses strong ideas when dealing with difficult situations and I believe this as well. In conclusion I feel Frankl did a good job in his arguments for logotherapy and survival in the words of C. S. Lewis either the premise is already concealed in the imperative or conclusion is the indicative.
