REVIEW OF APPLIED HYDRAULICS AND PNEUMATICS SRINIVASAN

- This book has the same exietment as the first,only this book takes a look at the very begginings of Redwall. Martin and his friends, Gonff the mousetheif, and Dinny the mole, must save the woodland creatures from the evil wildcat queen Tsarmina. However, Bella, a big badger, says that her father, the badger lord of Salamandaston, could surely be a great help in the fight against the evil Tsarmina. So Martin and his two friends set out on a journey to Salamandastron, to bring the great badger lord to the woodlands, so he can help save the woodlanders. This book is a pageturner, that is action packed!

- This is a book that should be read if you are interested in people. This is a book not so much about a city, but about the diverse people who make up the city.The stories are drawn largely from Tom Beller's excellent literary website, Mr. Beller's Neighborhood. Some of the stories are by professional writers, others are not. So naturally the writing styles and quality differ from story to story. Over all, the qualty is very good indeed.The book is divided into two parts, part one has stories written before 9/11. The stories here are from people who are proud to live in and be a part of the city. The people who write and appear in these stories are not the cold unfeeling people that New Yorkers supposedly are. They are very warm, flesh and blood people, all too human, even in their occasional flashes of arrogance.The second part is made up of stories that take place on 9/11 and after. The stories reflect people who are hurting, who have witnessed horrible things, who are trying to cope and understand what has happened to them and their city. But these people are still proud to be New Yorkers, even in the depth of their agony.This is a small book, but the stories in it are great indeed.
