REVIEW OF CHAPTER 8 DESIGN

- Haven't finished the book yet. So far I'm enjoying it and hope to read more similar books about the Yukon

- This is the kind of book that you will start and finish in a few hours. Fast, dynamic, intense and exquisitely written. Yang introduces a new theme that many have yearned for. She gives the reader a glimpse of the glorious Shanghai days before the Cultural Revolution, through the eyes of Sha Fei, the daughter of one of the long forgotten aristocratic families of the old Shanghai: "Images of the house remain in my head like snapshots- the red tiles on tapered roof, the gray steel window frames shipped in from Lyons when the house was built, fourteen foot ceilings, French windows opening to a verandah, the fenced in garden with Chinese parasol trees and a rose bush." I particularly enjoyed the first part of the book in which Yang explores old and new Shanghai in great detail. Bund bound...Great work.
