REVIEW OF NATURAL SCIENCES ADMISSIONS ASSESSMENT SPECIMEN PAPER AND

- This book is excellent and i highly recommend that everyone read this classic but this version is missing pages. Buy a different version!!
- Brave New World is perhaps the most portentous novel ever written in predicting the future design of society. Written in 1932, this science fiction satire has become more realistic than many would hope to experience. Saturated with pharmaceutical commercials promising mind-numbing nirvana, automobile ads full of picturesque non-existing vistas, and porn laden pop-ups offering short lived euphoria, today's commercially explicite society has come to parallel much of what Huxley described in this novel. Comprised of a society of the Alpha's, Beta's, Gamma's, and Epsilon's, with the former achieving human perfection in beauty, emotional control, and happiness through bio-technically enhanced means, the Brave New World is increasingly visible with the massive divide between the haves and the have nots, between those seeking immediate, consistent, short-term gratification and those experiencing long-term castigation and alienation. With our private islands, botox treatments, and continuous obsession with celebrity and luxury, the Alpha's of today are promulgating the destructive divide that is resulting between the hegemonic power-brokers of today and those reviling against its rampant consumerism. This novel must be explored multiple times as its deep-seated fundamental message continues to be more prescient with each passing moment.
