REVIEW OF THE TARANTULA IN MY PURSE

- Kurt Vonnegut cracks me up. But after reading most of his novels, I think Mother Night is my favorite. Unlike some of his other works, it appears to be the most focused and clean. It zones in on Vonnegut's strengths: historically based (WWII) characters that give us social commentary and a main character with so many flaws that he becomes both sad and hilarious. I especially appreciated the point of view: 1st person narration from a jail cell, telling the back story to explain to the reader why this guy's in prison in Israel. It's also a daring perspective to take: that of a Nazi propagandist. How do you sympathize?-- but you do! Also, I laughed out loud at the dialogue in the final showdown between the narrator and the man who'd dedicated his life to killing him. It is ridiculous and thoughtful at the same time. How does Vonnegut do it? He was a master humorist and storyteller.

- Mother Night is one of Vonnegut's best and especially after reading Breakfast of Champions, this one surprised me. Vonnegut has best range of a writer that I have ever seen(or read in this case). In Breakfast Of Champions, he throws you into the modern day world and doesn't expect you to really take any of this seriously. In Mother Night he takes you on the journey of Howard W. Cambell Jr., through his time as a playwright and author before the war, through his happy times with his wife, Helga, through his recruit ment by a disappearing american soldier, and so on. Anyway I thought it was going to be hard to take this into heart, but I ended up beleiving every word. Mother Night is not only a great Vonnegut book, but a great read in itself, pick it up you won't be dissapointed. Hiho.
