REVIEW OF RULE OF DARKNESS BRITISH LITERATURE AND IMPERIALISM 1830 1914

- I read Treasure Island for a language arts project. It was a very descriptive book, with very detailed characters and the settings. Robert Louis Stevenson had an incredible word choice and great ideas in this book. One of the things I had trouble with is that his sentence structure would be very jumpy and some times incomplete. For example he would have his characters fighting in the stockade and then the next sentence a guy was dead, shot through the head. My favorite character was captain Silver; he had one crutched leg and a good humor. He was not the main character but he did play a good size part, some of the things he said frequently made me laugh. His book is set in a time of pirates and treasure hunters and Stevenson captured their unique vocabulary, "why, shiver my timbers, if I hadn't forgotten my score". Some of the most significant events were in the beginning at the Admiral Benbow lodge, when there were a lot of unpleasant visits by an old captain carrying a sea chest, but this is where the main character Jim found interest in treasure hunting. My opinion of this book is that it was too hard for me. I'm a very intelligent student, but I couldn't always follow along with the book. I couldn't remember some of the characters roles as the crew and all the abbreviations were just so hard for me to read. It had good action in it so that definitely made me more interested in finishing it. I would say that this book is most likely to hard for any grade lower than 6th. It is good for any one 12-40. Over all I gave this book two stars.
