REVIEW OF EXPLORING STRATEGY 9TH EDITION EVALUATING STRATEGIES

- This is the fourth book in the John Carter/Barsoom series written by Edgar Rice Burroughs. In this story, the son of the Warlord of Mars, Carthoris of Helium, searches for and finds the Princess of Ptarth, Thuvia. As if it is not enough to fight strange creatures, the reader is also introduced to several new characters. This story continues the fighting adventure and fantasy of the series. Although John Carter is not a prominent character throughout this book, Dejah Thoris and John Carter's son is. Since Carthoris has inherited much of the speed, strength, and intelligence of the earth man, the story loses none of its excitement. In my humble opinion, this book loses none of the excitement we saw in the first three books. I like the fantasy the author has created, and this volume adds to that. We are once again introduced to new areas of Barsoom, and new species and cultures. How wonderful to be able to find new life forms when traveling across your own planet. For all the advancement we see on Barsoom, we find the people are sometimes less informed than the average earth man. I am still amazed by the fact that the author had such an active imagination at the time he wrote this series. While rockets and airplanes were not yet usable, he puts us on a planet in the solar system with airplanes and lighter than air land vehicles. His explanations for life on Barsoom is almost plausible. Yet, his ability to show us how to have peace amongst tribes that have always warred could be an example even today. Is peace possible, in the midst of fighting and horrific weapons? I do not have the answer, but perhaps it is something else to think about while reading these fantastic books.

- "Perfect" This book was incredibly helpful. I am just beginning to put my portfolio together and this book helped immensely. I found out what type of photos I should have, displayed, etc. Great how they should be Book!
