REVIEW OF DREAMTECH PRESS VISUAL BASIC

- Thomas Wolfe's You Can't Go Home Again is a big book in every sense of the word. It is a dauntingly ambitious novel of massive scope that can at times seem overwhelming. The story follows George Webber, a young writer living in 1920's New York City. Webber is charismatic and realistic, full of all the insecurities and conflicts that define us all. He is socially awkward, hungry for fame but terrified of the spotlight, yet brilliant and driven. Over the course of the novel, Webber achieves fame and recognition, but also finds something greater within himself and in America. He wanders to England and Germany, living under Hitler's shadow. He sees injustice, death, love, hate, and returns to America with a new hope in his nation's promise. The huge scale of this novel can seem daunting, and Wolfe's writing is a never-ending stream of thought, jokes, critique, and revelations. The novel is saved and made truly engaging by Wolfe's incredible grasp of the English language. He is scary good at writing. Every line is fluid, conversational, and beautifully written. In the end, the engaging stories, near-poetic writing, and far-reaching themes combine to create a truly moving book. George Webber can never go home again, and neither can Wolfe. All we can do is press on with them and see what we can find.

- We, The Arcturians comes across as a sincere effort by Dr. Norma to communicate messages received by her from the Arcturians to humankind. It is a multi-layered trip into the consciousnesses of extra-terrestrial/extra-dimensional beings. The book delivers more and more on subsequent re-reads. I discovered some answers to questions I had of my own experiences, which is always a delight. I've had a personal reading by Dr. Norma and it was exciting and very revealing. I found her to be a delightful, sincere person and recommend her highly. She can be found through her group, The Athena Center at [...].
